Dear Alumni and Friends:

As we start the 1993-94 academic year, I want to express my sincere thanks to each of you for your support of Southwestern. Our paid memberships in the Alumni Association have more than doubled this past year, which reflects your loyalty to your alma mater. You are our best recruiters as you go about your daily lives and make your presence known as a Southwestern graduate.

With funding provided through the passage of State Questions 649 and 650, we have purchased the Sayre campus, and the construction of the student union will start by early fall. On the Weatherford campus, we are currently automating and renovating the Al Harris Library. Also, we are developing plans for a classroom building and an addition to the Administration Building. Construction on these projects will start in 1994.

This is the first time in 25 years that the State of Oklahoma has provided funds earmarked for space and renovations needs on the various campuses, and we are deeply appreciative of this support. However, not all of the news is good news. The 1993-94 state allocation for higher education has been reduced, so our operating budget will be 5.13 percent less than last year. We are also working with a system-wide mandate from the State Regents to “right size” our institution and reallocate our available resources into programs that are central to our mission. This will include restructuring some programs while eliminating others. Needless to say, the next two years will be critical years in Oklahoma higher education and impact on the future of Southwestern.

Homecoming is September 25. Come back to “The Hill!”

As usual,
Making Their Mark

Bates, Capshew, and Romig named Distinguished Alumni

James R. Bates

Three Southwestern Oklahoma State University alumni will be inducted into the school’s Distinguished Alumni Hall of Fame during homecoming activities on Saturday, September 25, 1993.

The honorees are James R. Bates and Charles E. Capshew, both of Houston, Texas, and William Robert Romig of Los Angeles, Calif. The trio will be recognized at the Southwestern Alumni and Friends Luncheon at 11:30 a.m. in the Student Union Ballroom with formal induction scheduled during half-time of the 2 p.m. football game. SWOSU President Joe Anna Hibler will present each with a plaque.

Tickets for the Alumni and Friends Luncheon are $7 and must be purchased in advance. Tickets are available at the SWOSU Alumni and Development Office located in Room 201 of the Administration Building. Tickets also can be reserved by calling 774-3267.

JAMES R. BATES is currently a senior flight integration manager of the Space Shuttle Program at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, Texas. Some of his most recent assignments have been as lead flight integration manager for the Hubble Space Telescope deployment, the Compton Gamma Ray Observatory deployment and the Japanese Spacelab flights. His present challenge is the Hubble Space Telescope servicing mission in late 1993.

Born and raised in Clinton, Okla., Bates was valedictorian of the 1958 Clinton High School graduating class. He received a bachelor of science degree, Magna Cum Laude, in physics and mathematics from SWOSU in 1962. He was a member of the Physics Club for four years and served as president during his senior year. He is married to the former Rosalie Lewis, also of Clinton, and they have two children, Terri and James II.

In 1962, Bates accepted a position at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Manned Spacecraft Center in Houston as a Mercury Flight Controller. He participated in various flight controller assignments during Mercury flights six and seven, all of the Gemini flights and the early Apollo test flights. During the last Gemini flight in 1966, Bates was responsible for establishing the Mission Control Center position of experiments officer that became the current payload officer. During the period of 1962-67, Bates was instrumental in the hiring of 21 Southwestern graduates for the space program at Houston.

During the manned Apollo flights, Bates served as co-chairman of the Space Radiation Environment Group that developed the space radiation monitoring network and instrumentation that provided solar flare warnings and radiation measurements for the Apollo crews on the moon. During the last four lunar flights, Bates managed the science operations of the five Apollo Lunar Surface Experiment Packages placed on the moon by the astronauts. From 1969-76, he was co-investigator for the Lunar Dust Detector experiments left on the moon by Apollo 11, 14 and 15 as part of the ALSEP. Bates was project manager for two experiments flown on the Apollo-Soyuz mission.

Assigned to the NASA Shuttle Program office in 1978, Bates has been lead flight integration manager for 11 shuttle flights to date and has directly supported 14 other flights. Flight integration support begins approximately two years prior to flight, includes definition of flight elements, construction of the flight and participation during the flight in the Mission Control Center.

CHARLES E. CAPSHEW has worked with Phillips 66 Company for 16 years having been assigned nine different... jobs. Capshew has made two significant contributions to Phillips 66. First, he invented a polyethylene catalyst which is commercial today worldwide and is currently the basis for millions of dollars in sales in Phillips. Secondly, he spent five years helping to start up a new subsidiary, Catalyst Resources, Inc. He traveled the world to help to establish the business and, in the process, became knowledgeable about the worldwide polyolefin industry as well.

During the most recent five years, Capshew has been involved in a variety of assignments in the plastics division. Overall, Capshew has been instrumental in the creation of new businesses which, in turn, has translated to more jobs for people. He has generated significant net income for Phillips itself by producing new sales and by producing significant cost savings. He is also author/co-author of 17 U.S. patents and publications.

Southwestern Oklahoma holds many special memories for Capshew. He graduated from Chickasha High School in 1964. His mother, Ellen, passed away several years ago but his father, Frank, and step mom, Opal, still live near Cement. While Capshew was at SWOSU, he was involved in the leadership of the student affiliate of the American Chemical Society even serving one stint as its president. He graduated Magna Cum Laude with a degree in chemistry in 1968.

Capshew holds a master’s degree from Oklahoma State University and his doctorate from the University of Texas at Austin.

After leaving Southwestern, he earned his Air Force Pilot Wings and served three tours of duty in southeast Asia. Capshew flew reconnaissance missions on the first tour and bombing missions on the second and third tours. These experiences resulted in him being awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross along with various air medals.

Capshew met his wife, the former Lonna Chambers, a 1971 graduate of Southwestern and an English teacher, in college. They have three children: college senior Stephanie, high school freshman Rebecca and seventh-grader Ryan. The family has been active in various social causes and remain very active in church activities. Capshew is still a member of the ACS and the Society of Plastics Engineers. He served as chapter president of the Bartlesville-Tulsa section of SPE in 1982-83.

WILLIAM ROBERT ROMIG graduated from Clinton High School in 1944 as the class valedictorian. He attended the University of Oklahoma and then graduated from Southwestern in 1948 with a degree in education. His mother, Frankye Hartgraves Romig, also graduated from Southwestern Normal School and subsequently taught several years in and around Hitchcock. She lived in Watonga until her death in May, 1992.

After college graduation, Romig taught for three years in public schools at Butler, Clinton and at a consolidated school near Hobart. In 1948-49, Romig decided to take night courses at the University of Southern California where he took an introductory course of bacteriology. He became interested in this area and then enrolled at the University of Oklahoma where he worked for a master’s degree in bacteriology.

In 1954, he enrolled at the University of Texas in Austin to work on his doctorate. He received his degree in 1957 and then started teaching in the Bacteriology Department at UCLA where he started as an instructor and is now a professor. He is very active in research and is a founding member of the Molecular Biology Institute.

Romig has been involved in writing and administering research grants and running research laboratories consisting of 8 to 10 graduate students and research assistants. The main and continuing research efforts for Romig have included studies on the structure and genetics of bacterial viruses, mechanisms of genetic exchange in bacteria and genetic bases of virulence in several bacteria that cause disease.

Together, Romig and his workers have published about 100 scientific papers in various journals. About 25 doctorate students have trained in his lab with most of them spending from four to six years in the process. He has witnessed the progress of students to various government and industrial laboratories as well as positions at various academic institutions.

Romig has served as a visiting investigator in the Molecular Biology section of the National Institutes of Health and has served as a consultant to NASA. He was appointed to an advisory committee at Edwards AFB and was invited to serve as chairman of the Molecular Genetics section of the 12th International Congress of Genetics in Japan in 1968.

During the past five years, Romig and his fellow department professors have been actively engaged in helping design a new microbiology wing for a combined Chemistry-Microbiology Building at UCLA. His department moved to their new headquarters this August.

Romig and his wife, Mary Lorraine Scott, have two sons, Claude and Stuart. The Romigs enjoy musical events during their spare time and particularly enjoy opera.

He and his wife, Shylana, have two children, Orry (6) and Shylana (2).

After graduating from Amarillo High School in 1977, Birdsong attended Punter in 1978. He then transferred to SWOSU where he became a two-time NAIA All-American. He averaged 45.6 yards on 51 punts in 1979 which is still tops in the SWOSU school record book. He also still holds the NAIA career record for Highest Average Per Punt at 44.56 yards.

John Buck

John Buck still holds two SWOSU school records in football. The 1957 graduate completed 279 passes during his four-year career and still has the best career completion percentage among all Bulldog quarterbacks at 54.1%. His 102 pass completions in 1956 had been tops for years until last season when SWOSU quarterback Grant Pitt broke the school record by completing 108 passes.

Buck graduated from Southwestern with a major in business education and minor in physical education. He earned his master’s degree from SWOSU in 1963. Buck retired in 1991 after spending 20 years in the Altus Public Schools. The 1953 Altus High School graduate served as assistant superintendent for 14 years and principal for 6 years. Buck also previously taught in the Mangum, Elk City and Tipton public school systems.

He and his wife, Jane (Clabaugh), have two children, Susan Hepner of Altus and Steven Buck of Lubbock, Texas.

While at Southwestern, Buck lettered in football, basketball and track all four years. He was also named all-conference four years. Buck also served as student body president and was named Outstanding Senior Boy.

Truman W. Smith

Truman W. Smith was an offensive and defensive tackle on the 1952, 1953 and 1954 SWOSU football teams. He was all-conference all three years. Smith is now a successful businessman in Wichita Falls.

Smith is a 1951 graduate of Hollis High School and a 1955 graduate of SWOSU where he had a double major in physical education and social studies. After graduation, he then taught and coached at Shamrock, Texas, for three years before moving to Wichita Falls. He and his brother, Coy, later moved their families to Lyons, Kan., where they founded Pioneer Nursing Centers, Inc., in 1963. During the next decade, the firm built/acquired and operated 35 nursing homes. In 1969, Pioneer Nursing Homes became a public company and the Smiths later sold all their stock.

Smith is currently president of Cotru, Inc., and Truco Properties, Inc. He has held this position in the two companies since their inception in 1972. Truco currently employs approximately 1,300 people. Smith moved back to Wichita Falls from Frederick in 1980. Smith is a past member of the Board of Directors of Parker Square Bank in Wichita Falls and United Texas Financial Corporation, a Texas bank holding company. Smith served on these boards for over 20 years.

Smith has three children—Joe, Danna and Lee—and two grandchildren.

Smith has set up two football scholarship endowments at Southwestern each in the names of Joe Bailey Metcalf and Gordon “Cake” Gore. Smith is also a member of the SWOSU Foundation President’s Club.

Noble family donates art collection

The family of the late Lacy and Mary Beth Noble of Mangum recently donated the couple’s private collection of artwork to the Southwestern Foundation along with an endowment of $100,000 to be used for scholarships to benefit art students at Southwestern.

The university’s Visual Arts Department hosted the opening of the Lacy and Mary Beth Noble art collection with a lecture regarding the exhibit given by Visual Arts Department Chairman Patrick Riley and faculty member Park Lang. A reception followed to honor the family.

“It is such a marvelous gift,” Riley said. “By keeping the art collection intact, the family has created an actual awareness of cultural leadership. They have provided the incentive for Southwestern to start a permanent collection of fine art.”

Lacy and Mary Beth were both born in southwest Oklahoma. Mary Beth attended school at Willow and Eastview and graduated from Eastview High School in 1929. Lacy was born in Mangum and graduated from Mangum High School also in 1929.

Mary Beth received a teaching certificate from Southwestern State Teachers College and taught at several rural schools in southwestern Oklahoma. Her ambition was to be a speech therapist, so she continued her education at the University of Oklahoma receiving her degree in 1939. Lacy attended Westminster College in Missouri and graduated with a degree in economics in 1933.

He worked at the First National Bank in Mangum until the fall of 1938 when he began graduate work in accounting at the University of Oklahoma.

Mary Beth and Lacy were married on June 1, 1940. Following graduations, they established a home in Mangum where Lacy continued to work at the First National Bank with his father. The couple’s career plans were interrupted by World War II action in the early 1940’s.

After Lacy was released from the service, the Nobles moved back to Mangum where he resumed to work at the First National Bank. He became president of the bank in 1956.

Mary Beth became the speech therapist for the Mangum schools and other Greer County schools. She taught for many years and helped countless number of students with speech problems.

Mary Beth and Lacy liked colorful paintings with his style being modern and abstract art. Mary Beth’s favorite style of painting was traditional landscapes and still life. After retiring from their careers, they enjoyed traveling and shared an appreciation for the beauty of nature. The scenic areas of the Southwest were

"They were devoted to each other and the pursuit of knowledge and improvement in the quality of life," said nephew Max H. Post of Dallas. "They are an inspiration to others who believe, as they did, that education is a life-long process. Their interests in art, music and education has had and will continue to have a profound impact on all those who knew and loved them."

The Noble's collection Southwestern will be displayed in various buildings across the campus.

Astronaut sets up scholarship fund

Southwestern's link to the stars

Weatherford's most famous native, Lt. Gen. Thomas P. Stafford, has started a scholarship endowment fund at Southwestern which will benefit Weatherford High School graduates for years to come.

Stafford, who now lives in Alexandria, Va., has started, "The General Thomas P. Stafford Scholarship Fund," along with the help of three New York Stock Exchange companies—Allied Signal, Inc.; Wheelabrator Technologies, Inc.; and Fisher Scientific, Inc. Stafford has been working with the SWOSU Foundation.

The first scholarship, awarded by Stafford at Weatherford High School’s awards assembly, was a renewable full scholarship. Stafford’s plans are to award more than one scholarship in future years.

Stafford said he was amazed to hear that no specific scholarships were being designated to Weatherford High School students who plan to attend Southwestern. He said he was excited to start the endowment with hope that others in Weatherford will begin similar programs to benefit WHS students.

Stafford co-founded the Technical Consulting Firm of Stafford, Burke and Hecker, Inc. in Alexandria, Virginia. He sits on the Board of Directors of six corporations listed on the New York Stock Exchange, one listed on the American Exchange, and two others, including Seagate Technology, Inc. Seagate Technology is the largest independent hard disk drive maker in the world. He has served as an advisor to a number of governmental agencies including the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Air Force Systems Command. He was a defense advisor to Ronald Reagan during his presidential campaign and a member of the Reagan transition team. He presently serves on the National Research Council’s Aeronautics and Space Engineering Board; the Committee on NASA Scientific and Technological Program Reviews; and Space Policy Advisory Council.

He has been awarded the Congressional Space Medal of Honor; the Rotary National Award for Space Achievement (RNASA) and has been inducted into the Astronaut Hall of Fame.

Stafford, who was born in Weatherford, is a 1948 graduate of Weatherford High School. After graduation, he entered the United States Naval Academy, graduating with honors in the Class of 1952 and was commissioned into the United States Air Force.

He received his Air Force wings in September 1953 and flew fighter interceptor aircraft prior to entering the Air Force Test Pilot School in 1958. He was an instructor in the Test Pilot School from then until 1962, co-authoring two textbooks on flight testing.

Selected as one of the second groups of astronauts in September 1962, he piloted Gemini VI, in December 1965, performing the first rendezvous in space. As commander of Gemini IX in June of 1966, he performed the first optical rendezvous and the only overhead rendezvous in space. Colonel Stafford manually flew the entire reentry trajectory making the closest touchdown to the aim point of any Gemini or Apollo flight.

He commanded Apollo X in May 1969, the first flight of the Lunar Module to the moon. After Apollo X, General Stafford was chosen to head the Astronaut Office for several years. He made his fourth flight as Commander of the Apollo Soyuz Test Project in July 1975. This flight was the first international rendezvous and docking which was accomplished with the Cosmonauts of the Soviet Union.

He returned to Air Force assignments, directing the start of the F-117A Stealth Fighter program and personally writing the initial specifications of the B-2 bomber.

General Stafford retired in November 1979 having been the first member of his Naval Academy Class of 1952 to pin on the first, second and third stars of a General Officer. He has flown six rendezvous in space, an all-time record, and holds the all-time world speed record of 24,791.4 miles an hour. He has flown over 127 different types of aircraft and helicopters and four different types of spacecraft.

In June of 1990, General Stafford was asked to chair a team to independently advise NASA how to carry out President Bush’s vision of returning to the Moon, this time to stay, and then go on to explore Mars. General Stafford assembled teams of 40 full-time and 150 part-time members for the DOD, DOE and NASA, and completed the study called “America at the Threshold,” which is a road map for the next 30 years of the United States Manned Space Flight Program. General Stafford and Vice President Quayle held a joint press conference at the White House in June 1991 and announced the recommendations to the public.

SWOSU men's rodeo team won its second straight national championship June 20, 1993, in Bozeman, MT, while the SWOSU women ended up second. Two SWOSU cowboys won national runner-up titles in individual competition. Jack Sims, senior from Rome, GA, finished second in bareback, and Chad Johnson, a junior from Cut Bank, MT, finished second in team roping. Shelley Johnston was the winner of the all-around and goat tying national titles on the women's team. Johnston also scored all of the team points for SWOSU at the CNFR National finals. Dr. Don Mitchell has now coached 20 individual national champions and four national championship title teams. In addition to the three men's titles, the SWOSU women won the CNFR in 1988.

Four SWOSU baseball players have been named to the first teams of both the NAIA District 9 and Oklahoma Intercollegiate Conference honors squads for 1993. Junior first baseman/designated hitter Chuck Frizzell of Weatherford, senior shortstop Ricky Morris of Andrews, Texas, senior center fielder Tony Rodgers of Oklahoma City (PC West) and senior pitcher Josh Neese of Freedom were all honored. The quartet led the SWOSU Bulldogs to a 25-22 record and a third-place finish in the NAIA District 9 playoff tourney.

Along with receiving these honors, Neese and Morris were among 15 players named to the 1993 NAIA Great Plains All-Region Baseball Team. Neese and Morris were named to the honor team comprised of players from the states of Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, and South Dakota. Both were named to the NAIA District 9 Intercollegiate Conference in 1993.
Southwestern

Tops in all Sports

SWOSU has won the All-Sports Award in the Oklahoma Intercollegiate Conference for the 1992-93 school year. The award is based on conference performances in football, baseball, men’s basketball, and women’s basketball. SWOSU was the co-winner in 1991-92. Coach Cecil Perkins was also named the OIC Golf Coach of the Year. This is the seventh time Perkins has been honored by the OIC.

Southwestern

ranks in tennis

SWOSU women’s tennis player Lisa McNeil of Elk City won the #5 singles title at the NAIA District 9 women’s tennis tournament in Oklahoma City. Coach Kelli Litsch said it is the first time one of her players has won an individual title at the district level.

Welcome to Homecoming ‘93

On behalf of the student body at Southwestern, I would like to personally invite each and every one of you to Homecoming Weekend this fall. Each year a different theme is chosen. Ideas you might have for future homecoming themes are always welcome. The theme “Come Home to SWOSU in ’93” was chosen this year by the Student Association to emphasize the traditional significance of Homecoming. For students, Southwestern and Weatherford become “home away from home.” Those who have studied here retain a special place in the university community no matter where they may subsequently reside. Returning with pride for the annual Homecoming Weekend, former students are welcomed back “home” to the campus on the Hilltop. Join this year’s celebration! Enjoy the many activities, renew friendship, watch the parade, root for the Bulldogs, relive fond memories. “Come Home to SWOSU” in September.

Alan Spies,
President, Student Association
