Realizing the Dream
A Chinese proverb says that "the journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step."

For some that step is the beginning of the journey to attaining a college education. The decision to attend college is not an easy one; it is a decision riddled with thoughts of strict budgeting, massive time consumption, and of course dedication.

Each person has his or her own reason for taking this step, but most would agree that the advantages of getting a degree tremendously outweigh any burden that the journey might place upon them.

The journey begins as first-time students enter Freshmen Orientation. Most have no idea what to expect or what major to declare. The choices are overwhelming, but as their time at SWOSU continues they eventually find their niche and settle in. Before long graduation looms near and marks the beginning of yet more education for some, but for others it marks their release into the real world as they continue making the journey.

The seniors at Southwestern chose a university of 5,100 students in Weatherford, Oklahoma. They chose a major in one of the five schools. They studied, they worked, they socialized, they played. But, most important of all, they made it.

Dr. Les Crall wins 2003 Bernhardt Award

Dr. Les Crall is the latest winner of the Bernhardt Academic Excellence Award. Crall, a professor in the School of Business, won the award April 3 at a banquet.

The 44-year-old Crall is the youngest winner of the award that was established 10 years ago by Dr. William and Theta Juan Bernhardt of Midwest City.

The award goes to an outstanding faculty member who exhibits exceptional achievement in teaching, scholarship and service.
The college life includes much more than classes. It includes involvement in students organizations, events and social life. It included school and organization-sponsored events, educational and entertaining programs and just good times. It’s the best four years of many students’ lives.

Malinda Briggs, a Junior from Moore, won the 2003 Miss Southwestern Scholarship pageant that was held on Saturday, October 26 on the campus of Southwestern Oklahoma State University in Weatherford.

Along with the title of Miss Southwestern Briggs won a $2,160 scholarship and a $1,000 cash expense award. She was also the winner of the talent competition. Malinda quotes, "It was thrilling to win the pageant. I thought the entire night that if I took the crown off my head, I was going to wake up from someone else's dream".

Twelve talented contestants competed for the crown. Finalists were first runnerup, Amy Kilhoffer, a Junior from Elk City, who won a $1,160 scholarship. Kilhoffer was also the winner of the swimsuit competition and the peer respect/leadership award; second runnerup, Chelsea Dunn, a Sophomore from Enid, won a $760 scholarship; third runnerup, Jylian Garrison, a

Making It
Several hundred students gathered before school began not knowing what to expect when they arrived. It all began on a Saturday, where students gathered for a cookout at the Church of Christ Student Center and the Lawn of the Student Union for sundaes. In addition, Chi Alpha had a survivor session with door prizes.

During the week, many devotions and games were held among the campus ministries.

On Monday, tours of the campus and ice cream on the lawn were provided. Inspirational comedy from Jud Laipply, a dance and bingo took place on Tuesday.

Wednesday, classes began, and Thursday people gathered to watch "Spiderman" on the lawn. Sidewalk sales and cookouts ended the Dawg Days as students were ready to begin Ride'em Cowboy! Students rode a mechanical bull to see who could stay on the longest.

A new reign...

To start off a new year, the red carpet rolled out new candidates for the annual crowning of the new homecoming king and queen. Candidates this year were, for king: Corey Fuller and Derek Jamison, Queen: Siomara Davis, Courtney Hale, Bethany Kinney, Janet Pelzel, Lyndsay Roberts, Traci Thiessen, Heather Villines and Misty Williams.

After a week of free candy, chalk art on sidewalks and flyers filling up every free wall space, the race came sown to five last finalists. Jamison, Fuller, Davis, Roberts and Williams, were the ones selected to continue in the race.

On October 5, the day of homecoming, Derek Jamison and Misty Williams were crowned Southwestern King and Queen.

"I couldn't believe it at first. It's nice to be a part of the homecoming tradition," said Williams.

"The experience was great. I was surprised in winning since I was a transfer student," said Jamison.

Once again tradition was kept and a new Southwestern King and Queen were crowned. Homecoming 2002 was "Making It Royalty."
The Southwestern Student Government Association is the main way for students to make a difference on campus.

The Student Senate is the legislative body and voice for students.

The Executive council runs the day to day activities of the student government. Chaired by the president, the council has 12 permanent positions and a number of temporary seats.

The Supreme Court is in charge of approving new organizations on campus. Headed by the chief justice, the supreme court also has judicial review on legislation passed by the student senate.

SGA elections are held each fall, generally during the first week in September.

Being a member or supporter of SGA means that students have the opportunity to have a say in campus activities and be an active member of SWOSU. Each semester the SGA holds many academic, social, and community service activities including blood drives and the popular SWOSUpalooza. SWOSUpalooza is an annual concert held in the Spring to bring students together for a night of great music and good fun.

Local band Escape the Goat holds a jam session for the audience during SWOSUpalooza.

Making It
Southwestern has experienced Panorama events for many years now. In the past, they have made the campus appealing with visits from celebrities, comedians, and cultural, political and informational speakers.

Events covered topics like moral diversity, music, and comic relief.

Educational speakers, for example, Dr. Gregory Pence and Dr. Nigel Cameron held a debate covering the cloning issue. Dr. Peter Phillips spoke on "What the Media Forgets to Tell You." His lecture covered media censorship, power, class stratification and social welfare.

This year the events were not only educational; they were entertaining. While guests like ventriloquist, Jeff Dunham had the audience riling with laughter, other events such as The Saint Louis Brass Quintet and The United States Commodores filled the audience with great music.

The welcoming events were open to all students and faculty with different interests, in turn, MAKING IT INTERESTING.

The four fraternal organizations on campus may appear small and insignificant to some of Southwestern students. However, the 91 students who are dedicated to one of these social organizations see a different way of life...Greek Life

The traditions of the Greek's continue to grow with intensity and strength. This year, ZF sorority and CQ fraternity, have been added to the already well-established sororities- KDW and SSC. The participants in these organizations donate their spare time to community service, social functions, and most of all, each other.

Greeks are taught several lessonson the bonds of Sisterhood and Brotherhood. They know that the friendships made are to last an eternity and the bonds are unbreakable. They are also taught that success is an accomplishment earned, not given, and where there is a Greek, there is a leader in the making.

Southwestern added three more food lines in the Student Union over the winter break.

"The project took approximately 18 days, starting on Dec. 18 and ending on Jan. 3," said Duncan Taylor, Student Union director.

Now students can choose from four menus with twice as many food items than they did before going home for the holidays.

Casa Solano, Sunset Strip, and Arrezzio's Italian were added next to the Bulldog Grill.

Product, or food-court, concepts are branded using factory-based products, such as Tyson Chicken products at Sunset Strips.

Casa Solano provides a variety of Mexican food, while Sunset Strips offers varieties of different types of chicken products.

Arrezzio's Italian sells pizzas, calzones and subs. Along with these new food-court concepts come more jobs for students in the Student Union.

"Once we get employees trained, we will get the kinks out the system and it will be a better and faster service," Taylor said.

Making It
Attending a college as community-oriented as Southwestern, there are bound to be countless clubs and organizations involved with community service. Almost every fraternity or sorority, be it academic or social, has at least one community service project a year.

The largest organization on campus, Gamma Delta Kappa, is an academic honor sorority that tries to get involved with a service project at every monthly meeting. They have canned food drives and even make Valentine treats to take down to local nursing homes.
Helping out the Community

Even classes get involved with community service. According to Lance Buky, a Communication Arts major, his senior seminar class has helped our community by cleaning up a local park.

Student Government Association also plays a big role with community service. Stephanie Brandt, a Political Science major, is currently heading a new project titled, "The Big Event". This project involves many organizations and clubs coming together on a designated day to help local businesses clean up their property. Other community service project SGA heads are blood drives. This is a service that anyone can become involved in regardless of the club or organizations they are involved in.
"Making it" can be a daunting task unless you take some time to play a little. For a bit of recreation, students check out the local lakes. Just a few minutes outside of Weatherford, Lake Crowder offers all of the amenities necessary for some needed R&R. Crowder offers camping, scenic walking trails, volleyball, fishing, and of course, peace and quiet.

Remember, it can be quite difficult to "make the grade" if you do not take a break. Crowder and Foss Lakes fit this request perfectly. Chad Kinder heads the department at Crowder, where students hone their skills wilderness first aid, camp counseling, and intro/advanced rope courses. The department and student workers maintain the activities and park. Graduating seniors who maintain Crowder are Jaime Cook, Ryan Heart, Jenni Walker, Nick Risley, and Travis Lindley.

Approximately 35 miles west on I-40 sits one of Western Oklahoma's largest lakes. With over 8000 surface acres of water, Foss Lake offers a unlimited potential of recreational activities. The Foss Lake Adventure program, ran by Southwestern HPER department, provides positive experiences for Southwestern students, such as student practicums, internships, and jobs.

Making It
Many students chose to make it through their year by faith in God and participated in one of Southwestern’s religious organizations.

"Being able to be a part of a group of people that serve the Lord has made my four years of college much more enjoyable and exciting," senior nursing major Bethany Kinney said.

The Baptist Collegiate Ministries, Chi Alpha, Church of Christ Student Center, the Wesley Foundation, Catholic Student Union, Fellowship of Christian Athletes, and Campus Crusade all held weekly meetings to help students make it with ease.

Groups cooperated by planning meetings so that students could be active in more than one organization.
Students met at different religious organizations on campus for Bible studies as well as fellowship.

Volleyball, pool, ping pong, and television were just a few of the available recreation activities for students who needed a break from studying, and mission projects in other states, towns, and around the local community were always taking place. These organizations helped others make it by performing various work projects such as the BSU's spring break mission trip to Alton, Illinois and local Work Day held to raise money for missions.
At the end of a long, class-filled day, Southwestern students rush to get out the door. But what do these students do to keep their sanity outside of class?
Students survive outside the classroom walls

Some students find hanging out with a few friends to be the best way to relax. Whether it be renting a movie or playing a few board games, hanging out can be the best medicine after a bad day at school.

"student quote"

Working out can be a great way to relax and work off the pressure of college life. A new fitness center was opened on campus this year for students to use. There is also Body Active, the YMCA, and many other places that allow students to build their muscles.

Other students prefer the social scene. Going out to a club, such as Cowboys or Rodeo Joes, or driving from party to party allow students to chat with friends and the opportunity to make new ones.

Whatever students choose, finding something to do outside of class is almost as important as going to class. It can be fun, relaxing, and definitely ease the tension that college can bring.
The majority of students at SWOSU are making it through college life with part-time jobs. In order to make the money it takes to pay tuition, make a car payment and fund other numerous bills, students must work.

Tabble Kathol, a senior from Guymon, works at Stage.

"Within the two years I've worked at Stage, I have been able to pay part of my tuition," she said.

employment. However, finding time to balance class, a job, and fun is the hardest problem.

Kendra Kidd, a communication arts major from Woodward, has worked two jobs since she started school.

"It's especially hard to fit everything in when you work in two different departments," she said.

In the end, students with jobs are making it. They're making it in school, and they're making their future.

Fun, meeting new people, exercise, social interaction, competition, and champions- what do all of these bring to mind? Intramural sports, of course.

"I play intramural football, basketball, and softball. It’s fun, I meet new people, and it gives me something to do in between studying," said Wichita Falls senior Gabe Boyd.

Every year many students join in the fun, hopefully to win the coveted title of Southwestern Intramural champions. The title guarantees the teammates a t-shirt they can boastfully parade in around campus.

"It’s a great way to have fun and engage in social interaction," said Elk City senior Dandy Newton.

"Intramurals gives students the chance to be more active. you have something to do in your sparetime, and it makes you feel more at home," said Watonga senior Kim Kuehn.

Academic Life

Books. Classes. Mid-terms. Term papers. Class projects. Research. Essays. Homework. Tests. Finals. These words may make students cringe, but they also are the main reason they are in college.

Southwestern's reputation as a premier university is built upon its stellar academic programs, accredited major fields of study, and strong commitment to hands-on teaching. It may not be fun. It may not be painless. It may be down-right boring at times. But education is worth it come graduation time. Making it through class has many, many rewards.

The three emphases of communication arts - theatre, speech and mass communication -- were successful at home and at competitions this year. The theatre department held three plays and won numerous awards at the regional competition in Texas. The speech team, led by senior Misty Williams, fared well in many area competitions and at nationals. The student newspaper once again won many awards at the state-wide competition.

Changes in the English Department

A lot of changes are happening in the English Department. This year a reconstruction of the whole English program began. Soon there will be three different emphasis instead of two. Students will then have a choice of majoring in Writing as well as the existing majors of straight English and English Education. Not only will there be another emphasis to chose from for English Majors, but required classes will also change. Beginning in Fall 2004, students will only have to take two English literature classes and not three.

Southwestern nursing department was rewarded for their hard work and dedication.

The nursing graduates who took the NCLEX_RN examination received high results, which made Southwestern's passing rate the first among 1,352 schools in the United States.

However, the nursing program realizes there is more than exams to make a good nurse. This is why students go into the community to gain clinical experience. Throughout the year students went to various places such as the veteran's hospital in Clinton to gain hands on experience.

Students were able to focus on different types of illness during each twelve week rotation of clinicals.

Students in the nursing spend more time in practice than in the classroom.

Making It
The pharmacy school is the biggest school at Southwestern. People come here from all over the state just to get into the pharmacy department.

About 80 students apply every semester and about 60 get into the school. Pharmacy takes about six years to complete, and in the end pharmacy school pays off. When the student graduates, that student is hired for a promising and wealthy job as a Pharmacist.

In the school students are taught how to count pills, learn how the prescriptions work, and they are also taught a lot of chemistry about medicines. Pharmacy takes about two years of pre-pharmacy.

Then the student will appear in front of the board and apply for the actual pharmacy school. The student must have a 2.00 and a minimum of a 40 on their Pcat score.

• The numbers: For the second year, Southwestern's enrollment numbers were up. The fall enrollment was 5,135, up 3.6 percent from the year before.

• The cost: The U.S. News & World Report once again ranked Southwestern as one of the best buys in the nation. The low cost of tuition, combined with the quality of education, put Southwestern in good company. Also, Southwestern students had one of the lowest percentages of student debt.

Students in the music department learn how to take "notes." Through theory, history, and application, they learn to understand and appreciate music.

Chad Geraughty, a music education major says, "When I started college, music was just playing notes. Now I understand that music is an expression that satisfies the ears. You have to understand where you, the individual, fits in to the big picture. you have to have total passion for music to make good music."

Andrew Watson, who plans to be a professor of piano noted, "I'm more aware of the hard work and dedication that is required."

Megan Reeves, a future music therapist says, "I have learned how to really listen to music and it's intricacies."

The schools: A turbulent era in Weatherford Public Schools resulted in the resignation of superintendent Grant Frankenburg. Many teachers and parents complained that he ran off good teachers while making poor financial decisions.

The soldiers: Many local students were shipped out as early as October to help fight the war against terrorism and also against Iraq.
The art department at Southwestern is the perfect place for students to make masterpieces. Classes are offered in a broad range of technique and media. Students can make masterpieces in watercolor, oil, and acrylic painting, sculpture, ceramics, printmaking, photo-digital illustration, advertising, and package design.

While creating masterpieces in a variety of mediums students are exposed to every area of art.

The Art Department has a diverse student body, including recent high school graduates, non-traditional students and international students.

Students come to Southwestern from many different regions of the United States as well as several foreign countries. While here at Southwestern these students create masterpieces.

The people who have decided to create their career in visual arts are making an exciting decision when they choose to create their art at Southwestern.

Southwestern’s art department provides students with the educational environment, studio and technological facilities and teaching staff they will need to create art.

Enrollment in the art department is small, this allows students to have close and regular contact with professors.

Students receive individual attention and guidance while they create masterpieces.

Whether it was the hustle and bustle of footballs Homecoming, the excitement of Lady Bulldog basketball, or the thrill of the rodeo, Southwestern athletes' made sporting events highlights of the year.

The contests came and went, seasons were played out, and the chain of competition continued. As students practiced on a field, on a court, or in an arena, they worked with their teammates at being winners, whether the game was won or lost.

This year thirteen of Southwestern's athletes received academic recognition in the Lone star conference.

No matter the sport or the season record, southwestern students played the game because they love their sport.

Coach Paul Sharp led the team to a 7-4 record.
The Southwestern Bulldogs finished their season with a 7-4 record, which included key victories over Northeastern Oklahoma, East Central, and Central Oklahoma.

The Bulldogs were victorious in the homecoming game, defeating UCO 24-21 with a last second field goal by Scott Poole. This year the Southwestern football team traveled to Louisiana to take on the 5th ranked Div. IAA Northwestern St. Demons. The bulldogs fell short, but it was a good experience for the team.

"It was a great experience playing in a big-time college football atmosphere." said senior tight end Lance Buky.

Four players were named to the Lane Star Conference team: senior Scott Junk, offensive lineman, senior defensive lineman Anthony Piccirillo, senior linebacker Shane Winchester, and sophomore kicker Scott Poole.

The Bulldogs finished the season one win away from advancing to the LSC playoffs.

With five seniors leading the way, leadership was something this team was full of.

Coach Hauser’s retirement came as no surprise as it was time for the Bulldogs to try something new.

Many players had a successful year, with the stats to back it up.

"It was hard being a senior knowing that this was it, now it is time to go out in the real world and what you have lived for ever since you were a child no longer has any importance, basketball is over and the real world begins," said senior Smaj Johnson.

A late-season run for the Lady Bulldogs continued into the Lone Star Conference playoffs. The team won its last four regular season games to qualify for the playoffs, then upset highly ranked Angelo State, 70-55, in the first round. Even though the season ended in the semifinals against West Texas A&M, the big wins down the stretch showed that the Lady Bulldogs can be competitive in NCAA Division II.

The Lady Bulldogs were led by three seniors -- Amanda Burris, Ashlee Hamar and Kiki McClellan. Hamar was named to the Lone Star Conference second team, and Burris was joined by Roxie Camden and Paige Adams on the honorable mention all-conference team. Kayla Horn, who averaged 10.8 points and 6.2 rebounds a game, was named conference freshman of the year.

In his fifth season as manager of the Southwestern Oklahoma State baseball team, Charles Teasley looks to be a force to be reckoned with in the Lone Star Conference. The Bulldogs have a strong young core, surrounded by five seniors this season.

With strong arms on the mound and an added sense of consistency, the Bulldogs can compete with the top teams in the Conference.

Last season the Bulldogs ended their season with a 29-18 record overall and 13-8 in LSC play. The Bulldogs finished second in the LSC North Division.

As of March 30, the Bulldogs are 16-10 and 2-3 in LSC play and with 12 games left anything can happen.

Josh Raney leads the team with a batting average of .419. He has played in all 26 games. Raney has 36 hits, 34 RBI's and has scored 27 times. Raney has also homered seven times.

Jake Dillard leads the team with a 0.93 ERA. He has pitched 15.0 innings, giving up 13 hits, 5 runs, striking out and walking 12 batters.
The past two seasons the Lady Bulldogs have been on a winning streak. This season the Lady Bulldogs have a solid core, losing only one senior last season and adding seven freshman to the squad. Last season the Lady Bulldogs finished with a 29-20 overall record and 13-7 in Lone Star Conference play. The 26-win season marked the second best winning streak in the history of Southwestern softball.

This season, as of April 1, Southwestern is 12-27 and 1-5 in LSC play and with 8 games left anything can happen. As of March 30, Candace Brown leads the team with a batting average of .389. Brown has played in 33 games. She has 35 hits, 13 RBI's and has scored 18 times. Brown has also homered twice.

Kristen Bailey leads the team with an ERA of 1.85. She has pitched 64.1 innings, giving up 69 hits, 36 runs, striking out 21 and walking 15 batters.

In other good news, the Lady Bulldogs had a new field to use. It was built in a wheat field north of the university.
Southwestern’s men and women’s rodeo teams are among the nation’s elite. After competing in six of ten rodeos, the Southwestern men are 12th in the nation and the women are nationally ranked in 15th place, according to the February issue of Collegiate Arena.

Chad Ramirez, Southwestern rodeo coach, said “The Southwestern rodeo teams are doing well in the region also.”

The men’s rodeo team is currently in first place in the Central Plains Region with a 250-point lead over Panhandle State University. The Southwestern women are in a close second behind Northwestern Oklahoma State University.

Not only are the teams excelling, but several talented individuals are atop the regional rankings.

Cord McCoy, a senior from Tupelo, is winning the regional all-around, is first in saddle bronc riding, and is placing in the bare back, bull riding, and team roping heeler events.

Taylor White, Bandy Murphy, Justin Hermanson, Cody Sundby and Cody Todd are placing in the region as well. Jennifer Heisman, a senior from Paola, Kan., is currently leading the goat typing competition in the Central Plains Region.

Ashilen Houston, Amy Clark, Tanya Gasche, Gentry Ortiz, and Jessi Houston are all among the top 10 in the region in either the goat tying or the breakaway roping events.

Recognized as a group with great skill and potential, the Southwestern rodeo team will have an opportunity to showcase their talent in May. At the regional playoffs, which will be held in Lawton, OK, the team will have the chance to progress to national competition. Before playoffs begin, team and individual points are erased and top performance is required to advance.

“Everything has to work; it’s do or die time,” Ramirez said of playoffs.

Should the teams qualify at playoffs, they will then travel to Casper, Wyoming, in June for the College National Rodeo. With the exceptional talent that the Southwestern Rodeo team possesses, Ramirez feels that the team has an...
The recent success of the Southwestern rodeo team should be of no surprise. Ramirez said that Southwestern has "produced numerous successful pro rodeo cowboys and pro world champs including Jett McCoy, Cord McCoy, Michael Cooley, Eric Mouton, and Mark Gomes."

Ramirez does his best to seek out talented individuals for the Southwestern rodeo team. He looks at junior college transfers and pays close attention to outstanding high school talent. Ramirez travels to rodeos and watches videotape of possible team members. He generally chooses two or three freshmen for his team and is always "welcoming a lot of Oklahoma talent."

The 2002-2003 Southwestern Rodeo Team is comprised of 42 students from 14 states. These states include Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Montana, California, Arizona and many others.
Fun. That is the word most likely used by the senior players and coach Joe Bradley to describe this year's team. From memories of crowded renegade vans, shaking buses, heisted soccer balls and speed bumps in Chickasa that seem to get bigger every year to dares and double dares on the practice field how could it have not been fun.

It wasn't all play for the Lady Bulldogs though, as they once again improved on their previous records. They ended the season with a misleading 6-11-2 record, including a hard fought loss to nationally ranked rival UCO.

The team will be proudly graduating four players this year: #7 midfielder Katarina Herdova, a marketing major from Slovakia, #8 midfielder Desiree Connely a natural science and secondary education major from Broken Arrow, #11 midfielder Alanna Bradley a mass communication major from Yukon, and #14 sweeper Victoria Skocdopole a nursing major from Claremore.

Joe Bradley, the third year head coach for the Lady Bulldogs knows something about Southwestern pride. He is older brother to Alanna, a former assistant coach here and a former Southwestern soccer player. Those close to the team know that coach Bradley's expertise in coaching and recruiting have led to the turnaround of this very new program.

"This is the closest team I've coached," says Bradley, "and we had a lot of fun this season."

The Southwestern Men's soccer program finished out the season at 7-9-2, and 1-4-1 conference. The program was added to SWOSU athletics in 1999 and was planned to be cut for next year. Fortunately the team raised enough money to overcome the budget deficit and will continue play for at least one more year.

Graduating from the team this year are: #1 goalkeeper Robbie Miller, a music major from Lawton, #10 midfielder Patrick Byars, a business major from Norman, #3 forward Joe Peeler, a physical education major from Choctaw, and #2 defender Shamus Moore, a business administrative major from Mustang.

One of the fund-raisers to keep the team alive was held at Carls Jr.

Who are the ladies on the sidelines boosting school enthusiasm at every point of the football and basketball games? They're the Cheer and Pom Pon squads.

Southwestern Cheer and Pom has always had one goal: to promote school spirit and loyalty at all times.

This year the squads were moved to athletics and received a new sponsor, Pam Nichols. The move enabled them to be more involved on campus and in the community.

Besides their volunteer work, the ladies practice year-round to be prepared for games. The 2002-2003 captain of the cheerleading squad is Kim Khuen and the pom captain is Shelby Higdon.

You can catch the Pom Pon squad dancing at the halftime of every football and basketball game and the Cheerleaders encouraging spirit at all times.
The cross-country team of eight girls and their coach Adina Peters traveled as close as Stillwater and as far as Dallas this past season. The team also had four new freshman added to their roster which proved to be a great help.

The ladies team had two members receive academic honors, Sophomore Jessica Thompson from Yukon was selected to the LoneStar Conference All-Academic team, and from Elk City, Senior Amy Kilhoffer was selected to the Commissioner's Honor Roll.

The SWOSU softball team finally has a home of its own. A new field has been completed. The new field is located just north of town, on Caddo.

The softball team is excited about the new field and thinks it will give them an advantage this year. There will also be a new baseball field built next to the softball field. The baseball field will be completed in time for next year's season. That's not all, a new soccer field as well as, intramural softball fields will be built on SWOSU's land north of town. It promises to be a state-of-the-art facility and should bring SWOSU team sports to a new level.
A new wellness center will be built on SWOSU campus starting this fall. Construction on the center began directly after baseball season. The new wellness center will be built where the baseball field now rests. Inside the center there will be three basketball courts, two racquetball courts, a weight room, a cardiovascular room, a rock-climbing wall, and many other things to keep SWOSU students busy. There will also be classrooms inside the center as well as 166 new parking spots. The wellness center will be a great addition to the SWOSU campus.
