If you have ever needed help in any way, then you have probably met Mrs. Leroy Thomas (more affectionately known as Johnnie Faye). She is the guardian angel of the pharmacy faculty and student body; nothing would be organized without her.

Born in Mangum, Okla., Johnnie Faye has lived mainly in Oklahoma and Arizona. Her husband, Leroy Thomas, is an associate professor of English here at SWSC, and at present, is on leave doing PhD work in English at OSU.

Johnnie Faye also received her BS degree in business from SWSC.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas have one daughter, Shila, who is nine years old, and evidently keeps her mother pretty busy helping with her Girl Scout work.

Mrs. Thomas is a member of AAUW, Kappa Kappa Iota Sorority (a sorority for women teachers and wives of teachers), and the First Baptist Church, where she teaches Sunday School to the five-year-old group. This past year, she was also chairman of the secretaries for this OEA district . . . a job which she enjoyed very much.

Her hobbies include sewing, cooking, swimming, and attending good plays, especially those of the Mummer's Theatrical Group in Oklahoma City.

When asked about her job, she claimed that she gives all the work to her dependable and efficient student secretaries, Jane Dickison, Theresa Birdwell, Sherry Austin, Carol Dillard, and Kathy Brownlow.

Being secretary to the dean involves general office work, public relations work - answering students' questions and helping them as much as possible. Other duties involve typing for the teachers and running off mimeographs.

Johnnie Faye says that she really enjoys her job because she gets to see and talk with many people, and there is no dull routine which must be followed each day.

She muses, "If your attitude is right, you enjoy your job. Here the students and teachers are so nice, it makes my job a pleasure."

Phi Delta Chi Honors Mrs. Black

It was with great pleasure that Phi Delta Chi dedicated its present edition of the "Stimulator" to Mrs. Ina G. Black.

It is impossible to separate, with one degree of honesty, her name from that of Southwestern State College School of Pharmacy. She has been the very basis of pharmacy, teaching, and striving successfully to portray the integral part of ethics and morals as related to our profession.

What we owe this fine lady can never be expressed in words sufficient to cover how we feel.

Initiation: On Feb. 10, 1969, eight prospective members began this final phase of pledgship with informal initiation. Those going through informal initiation were: Larry McWilliams, Ed Pfeiffer, Roger Davenport, Houston Anderson, David Acker, Bobby Webster, Dennis Jordon, and Stephen Pray.

Each pledge then went on to enjoy a night of fun and frolic, administered by active members of Phi Delta Chi.

On Feb. 11, 1969, the pledges underwent another stage of initiation termed "Scavenger Hunts" which proved to be quite hilarious.

ious.

By the time of this printing of the "Southwestern Pharmacist" these men will have undergone their formal and be active members of Phi Delta Chi.

Smoker: Alpha Omega Chapter of Phi Delta Chi held its annual spring smoker on Feb. 11, 1969. As in the past, the ballroom of the Student Center was the site of choice for this activity. The master of ceremonies for this occasion was John Krittenbrink.

This function allowed the prospective pledges to become better acquainted with the active membership as well as the high ideals of the fraternity.

Attending the smoker were approximately 30 rushees, our 37 active members, Gary Storseth, an alumni, who filled in for our sponsor, Dr. Douglas Kriesel. Cigar girls for this affair were Dee Medford, Iris Morgan, Alice Stephens, Mary Kay Malloy, Mary Brown, and Darlene Johnson, all members of Sigma Kappa social sorority.

Entertainment for the evening was provided by "The Fog" and various members of the fraternity.

KE Christmas Party

It was December 9 in the Student Union TV Lounge, the night of the Kappa Epsilon Christmas Party for the children of the faculty and senior students.

Members were hurrying here and there greeting guests, taking coats and sampling punch. While others, especially the "little ones," waited impatiently for Santa.

Their wait was quickly rewarded as the Jolly Man himself bounced into the room. Soon each had his turn on St. Nick's knee (including Mrs. Black!) and received a candy-stuffed stocking for his bravery. Afterward, cookies and punch were served while all settled down to visit and enjoy the younger set.

We of KE wish to express our sincere thanks to "Santa" Lee Drane, who performed his part like a real pro.

Board Meets

The SWSC School of Pharmacy and the Oklahoma State Board of Pharmacy were co-hosts to the annual sixth district meeting of the National Association of Boards of Pharmacy and the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy.

Dr. Walter Dickison, dean of SWSC School of Pharmacy, and Joe Schwemin, secretary of the Oklahoma State Board of Pharmacy, were co-chairmen of the meeting held Nov. 3-5 at the Camelot Inn in Tulsa.

Dr. Dickison presided over the first session of the program, and Dr. Al Harris, president of SWSC, presented the welcome. Also, Mrs. Ina G. Black and

Dr. Charles Schwartz, both faculty members of SWSC School of Pharmacy, participated in the program.

Other members of the SWSC pharmacy faculty who attended were Dr. Homer F. Timmons, Dr. Floyd S. Ulrich, Norman Foster and Gloria Ardueser.

Dr. Stanley G. Mittelstaedt, School of Pharmacy, University of Arkansas Medical Center, is secretary of the sixth district composed of the states of Arkansas, Kansas, Louisiana, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

The Southwestern Singers, directed by Dr. Merle Taff of the Music Department, provided entertainment.

Dean Comments

This has been "Religious Emphasis Week" on campus, a week hopefully, in which students and faculty members pause a moment to turn their thoughts inward, and upward. In reflecting upon this, I thought about some favorite quotations from the scriptures. What are yours? I have several, but of late I believe that my favorite has become one which occurs frequently in the Bible, and one which I would commend to you. "And it came to pass." It is a simple phrase, but for me it has a real meaning, and hope for our times.

"And it came to pass." Surely this madness, this sickness which is threatening the very survival of our nation will pass. The militants who seemingly seek to destroy for the sake of destruction, stir up dissent for the sake of dissent, tear down our institutions, desecrate our flag, pervert our traditions, yet offer no solution for the many very real and serious problems in our society, surely they will pass. And the indecision, the inertia, the hesitation of our nation in dealing with the problems of society, these too must pass, if the smog which clouds America--land of the free and home of the brave--is to be lifted and our national heritage preserved.

SOUTHWESTERN PHARMACY FOUNDATION

Dear Alumni and Friends:

Did you ever stop to consider where you might be today if you were not a pharmacist? Hasn't pharmacy been good to you? If it has not, read no further. If it has, isn't it time for you to give something back to pharmacy? Members of our sister professions of medicine, dentistry, osteopathy, and optometry consider it the rule, rather than the exception, to contribute regularly to the support of their own professional schools. They have recognized the fact that top quality education for the professions can no longer be maintained by schools which must depend solely upon income from tuition and state appropriations. Like the icing on the cake, it's that little bit extra which makes for distinction. It provides those badly needed laboratory instruments and equipment for which no other funds are available, matching money to bring in Federal and private philanthropic grants, help for that capable student who can not continue in school without assistance, and many other things. And more than this, it gives each contributor the satisfaction of having a vital part in perpetuating, molding, and shaping the future of his profession.

Remodeling of our present facilities and construction of a new wing to our building are now in progress. We need help now, and this is the time to help--to give something back to pharmacy--by contributing to the School of Pharmacy through the Southwestern Pharmacy Foundation of Southwestern State College. If each alumnus and friend of Southwestern will give generously according to his means and his personal obligation to the profession of pharmacy, we can easily exceed our goal of $100,000 in pledges and cash by 1971. Many are already giving, or have given, and to them we are most grateful. Several have paid off one pledge, and have again pledged and are paying a second time.

Contributions of any amount are welcome and appreciated. Special recognition will be given to all past and new contributions of $100 or more, in the form of a beautiful acknowledgment certificate, suitable for framing. Names of those persons who give $300 or more will be inscribed on a permanent plaque to be located in the new addition to our building. An honor roll of contributors will be published in the 1969 edition of "The Apothecary."

Pledges over a three-year period are suggested, with payments on a monthly, quarterly, semi-annual, or annual basis. Contributions are tax deductible.

Complete and mail the pledge form below with your first payment today. You, and we, and generations yet unborn, will be glad you did.

Thank you for your loyalty and support.

Sincerely,

W. L. Dickison, Dean

There's a guy in one of our offices who has a nickname of "Detergent." The gals all say he works fast and leaves no ring.

During the recent election one of the candidates for Congress got this admonition from a constituent: "Please don't try to improve my lot in life any further . . . I can't afford it."

Of the 525 U.S. drug innovations since 1940, the laboratories of American manufacturers were responsible for 90%, says the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association.

Dispensing Teaches Fine Points

Pharmaceutical Dispensing is that aspect of pharmacy concerned with the processing and handling of prescriptions. Dispensing 504 and 515, taught by Professors Gloria Ardueser and Edward Christensen, include detailed study of the prescription and the basic techniques and principles of modern compounding and dispensing.

Each laboratory section is limited to approximately 19 students to allow for more individual attention and instruction. Mrs. JoAnn Martin is the laboratory instructor.

In addition to basic compounding equipment, each desk is provided with a typewriter, telephone, torsion balance and a supply of drugs in powder form. The laboratory contains a reference library which includes a Micro-tel information source.

In the laboratory, the student has an opportunity to:

- a. dispense prescriptions utilizing trade name products donated by pharmaceutical manufacturers
- b. receive telephone prescriptions
- c. compound prescriptions for dosage forms such as capsules, ointments, etc.
- d. recognize and solve incompatibilities
- e. identify tradename tablets and capsules
- f. act as a consultant
- g. utilize various record systems.
