BULLDOG

Foreword . . .

The magic of printer's ink has crystallized for you, a year at Southwestern Tech. No matter if it were your first year or your fourth, it was a year of growth and change, of matured beliefs . . . a year which saw international affairs explode into a war that made you cling more firmly to your ideals. But behind the sharp imprints of things of great importance, are the memories of all the little things that have made of your college life an unforgettable experience. Realizing this, we have tried to tint these pages with the warm, friendly spirit of your life at college. Caught in your memory are many things . . . eight o'clock classes on mornings of brittle cold . . . the band playing alma mater . . . your earnest poring over the hows and whys of philosophy . . . laughing faces above swirling party dresses . . . midnight bull sessions . . . We hope you will recapture these things, with more than a dash of undergraduate sparkle, in those moments in the years to come when you will again open your copy of the 1942 edition of the BULLDOG.

Dedication . . .

In a time when we feel that an uncertain, shaken world is challenging our most fundamental and most deeply cherished ideals, we feel a growing respect for a school which gives to its students the priceless heritage of a democratic philosophy, guides them in the formation and preservation of their ideals, and gives them an understanding of the value of tolerance and friendship . . . friendship that instills in the very souls of men, the truly great things of life . . . freedom, fraternity, liberty, love . . . friendship that unites people in the face of great tasks and enables them to attain their highest aspirations. It is to this characteristic spirit of campus friendliness that we, the students of Southwestern Institute of Technology, dedicate this symbol of ourselves and our school, the BULLDOG.

ADMINISTRATION

Library . . .

★ Longfellow and Lowell, Whittier and Whitman hob-nob inside; but outside, eds and co-eds relax on the steps of the Library to absorb the sunshine until the bell sends them inside to absorb Greek history. . .

Science Hall . . .

☆ Classes over, students spill out of the Science Hall and down the steps . . . after calculus and philosophy, weary students loll on warm old stone . . . if buildings could speak, what stories might be told of the years the Science Hall has rested on the hill, watching the growth of Southwestern and Southwesterners. . . .

GOVERNOR LEON C. PHILLIPS

THE STATISTICS showing relative demands for human services in our State and Nation have heretofore had too little attention from parents, young people, and many of our so-called educators. The result has been that many young people graduating from our schools and colleges have found themselves in fields already overcrowded, and have been obliged to adjust themselves to other types of work for which they had not been trained.

Present conditions are emphasizing the need for young people trained in technical and vocational lines. Those young people whose minds and muscles are being trained to meet the actual conditions they are bound to face in life are equipping themselves to enter the broadest and most important field in America today.

My congratulations and sincere best wishes to all students of Southwestern Institute of Technology.

Leon Phillips

LEON C. PHILLIPS,
Governor of Oklahoma.

HISTORY WILL RECORD the short span of years between the two world conflicts as an epoch of universal freedom and equality. The course of future events will be the yardstick for measuring the efficiency of the democracy we believe in. And our facts founded on education for all the enlightenment for the oppressed will prevail over might.

The few short months of war for America has justified the claims on which our freedom is based. We have seen the ambitions of youth crystallized by the gravity of the task before them, and their efforts in the many fields of endeavor diverted into a single channel in the stream of life ever gaining momentum and surging forward through the sinuous course to what must be the freedom of the sea.

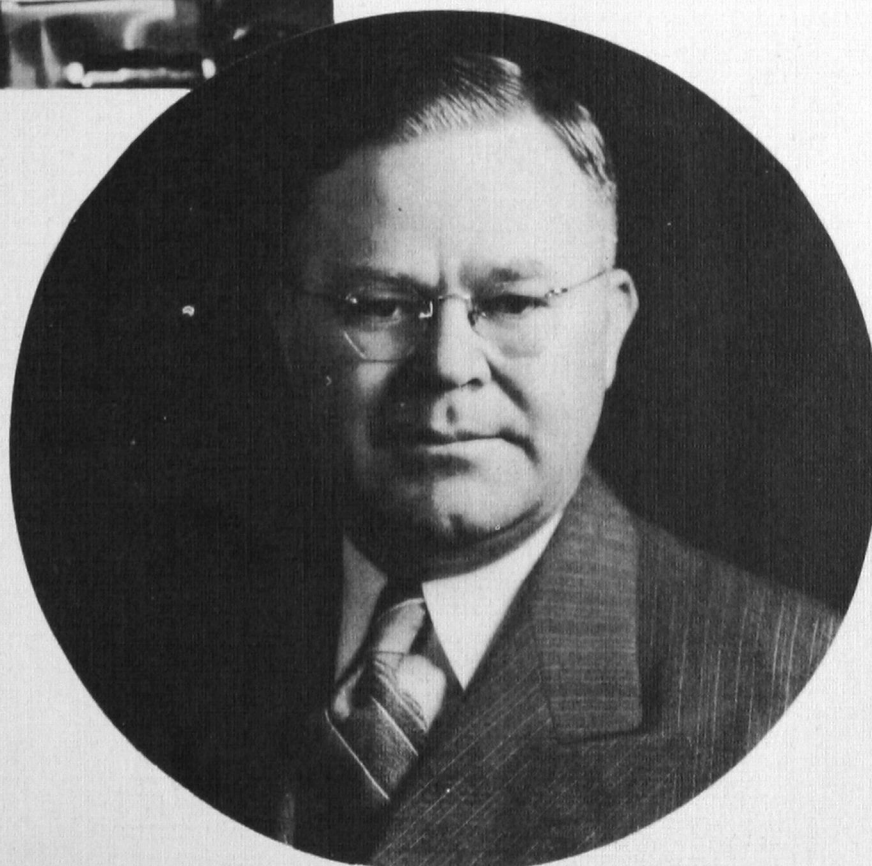

Southwestern has played a part in this picture of a nation at war. Her sons have gone into every phase of defense proving the value of a broad curriculum to meet the emergencies of life. We are proud of the endeavors of these young men, but Southwestern Institute of Technology must grow in the service of our nation. Every effort must be directed to that end.

James B. Boren

—JAMES B. BOREN,
President.

PRESIDENT JAMES B. BOREN

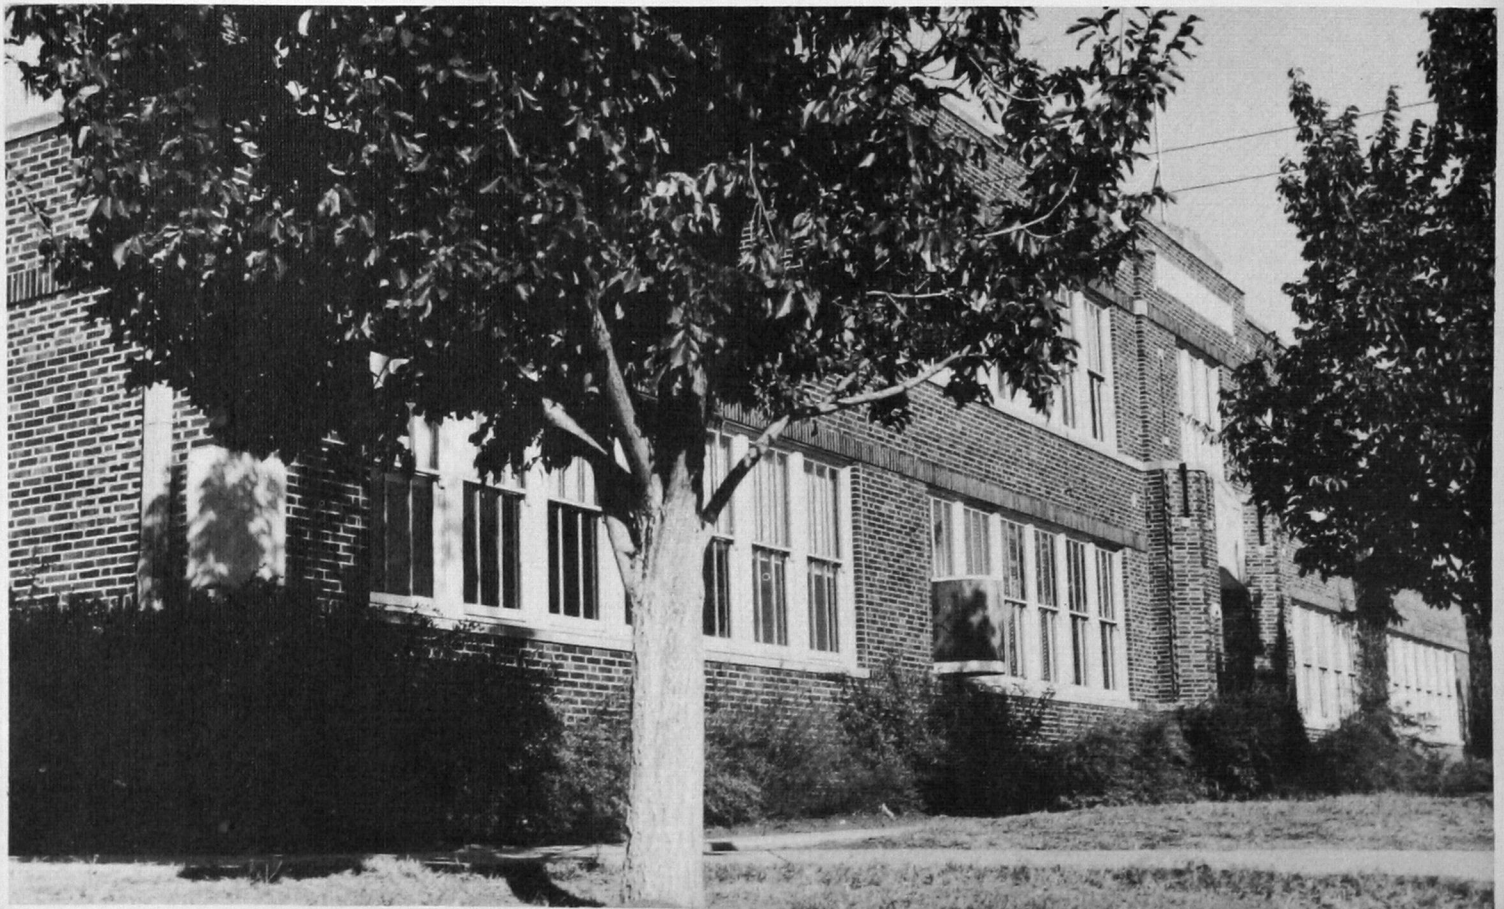

Training School . . .

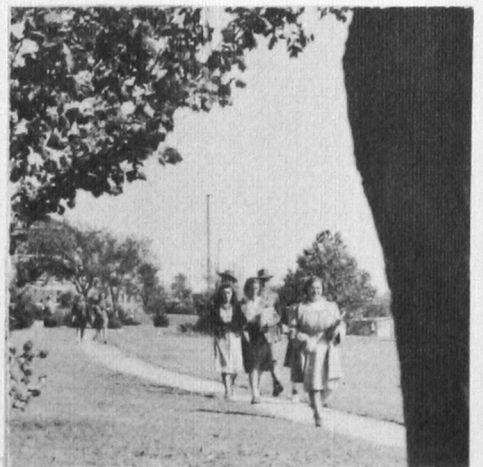

☆ The professors of the future stroll down shady walks on their way to the training school . . . they consider their practice teaching credits the most important of all those they earn in college . . . when they enter the training school, co-eds don long hose and dignified looks for the benefit of their students . . . the eds drop their collegiate repartee, for they will be called "Mr." . . . the sun glints on the Weatherford High School Building, where Southwestern students learn to teach by observing and by doing . . . practice makes perfect profs. . .

Vocational Building . . .

☆ A symbol of Southwestern's vital part in the defense of our nation, is our Vocational Building . . . although it has existed but two years, it is of vast importance, for it houses the national defense projects as well as the industrial education which defends us from the hazards of unemployment and low standards of living . . . here Southwestern aids in the external security and internal solidarity of our nation . . . in this native stone building, cosmetologists learn to preserve their nation's beauty . . . the boys learn to preserve their nation's peace . . .

Board of Regents . . .

✧ In the limelight of educational importance are these individuals, known formally as the Board of Regents, but remembered by Southwesterners for their sincere interest in the welfare of Oklahoma schools . . . we could say many things about them, but the fact that within a year, they have put their all-important stamp of approval on the construction of three new buildings on Southwestern Tech's campus speaks for itself . . . the completed "Y" Building and new Field House, together with the rapidly rising Administration Building, give mute evidence of their friendliness and their cooperative spirit . . .

Deans . . .

☆ OUR DEANS—the three forces that make of Southwestern, an integrated, functioning whole.

Friendly, square-dealing Dean Dragoo works out the curriculum, teaches mathematics, and serves as chief executive in the absence of the president . . . The quiet smile of Mrs. Phoebe Addison is familiar on Tech's campus, particularly to the Southwestern co-eds to whom she is a friend and counselor . . . Dean of men and associate professor of history, G. P. Wild is well noted for his unprejudiced viewpoint and broad knowledge of matters involved in the international crisis.

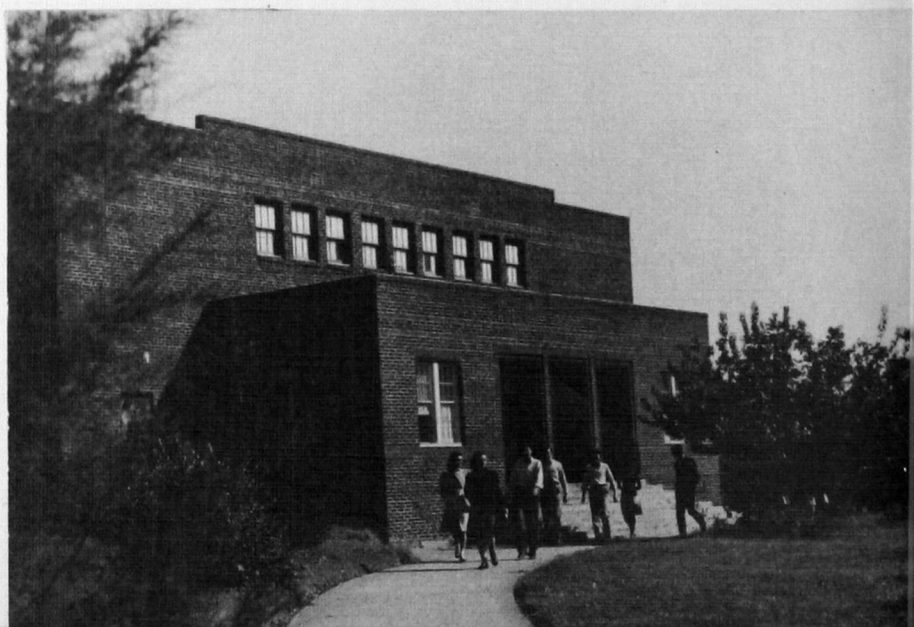

Southwestern Tech salutes these individuals to whom it is deeply indebted—our deans.

✧ The sun sifts through the trees and touches the red brick of our president's home . . . the warmth and simplicity of the colonial architecture reflects the cordiality of Southwestern's First Lady. . .

✧ Strikingly framed by columns of the Science Hall, the tennis courts look almost unfamiliar without the students who, on warm afternoons, customarily dot them with splashes of moving color. . .

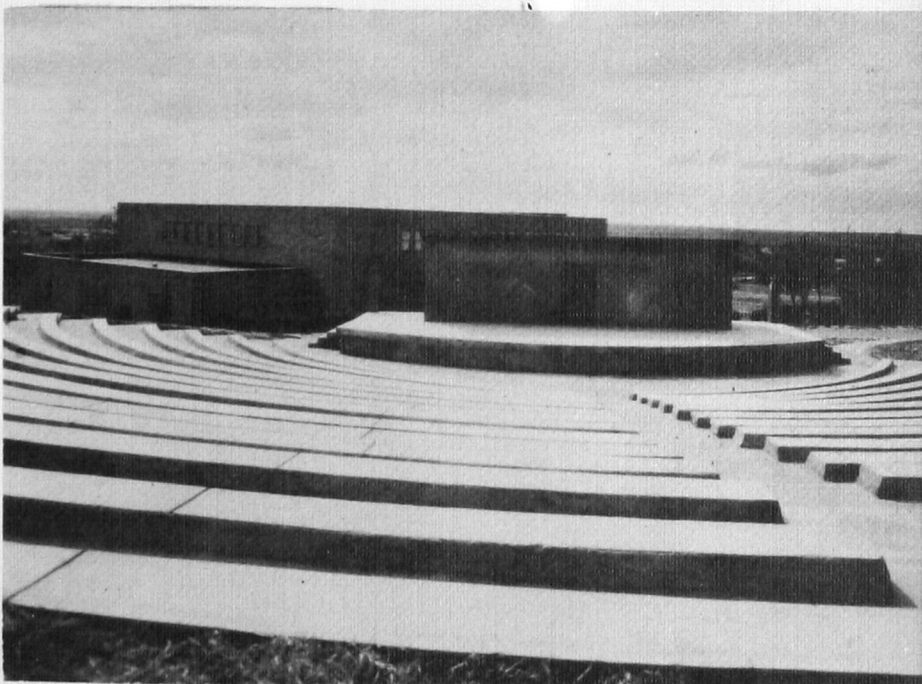

✧ After hours of exercising muscle, physical education students saunter toward the library to exercise gray matter . . . Listen! . . . can't you hear the shouts of the players inside . . . the thud of the basketball as a co-ed dribbles it down the court . . . in the Gymnasium, Southwesterners forget their studies, and learn sportsmanship. . .

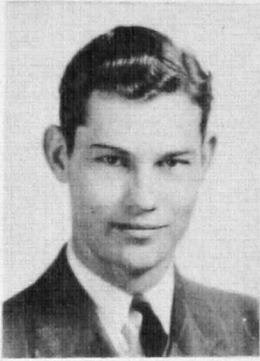

✧ The "baby" of the campus—the "Y" Chapel . . . a building larger than itself, it symbolizes what an indomitable purpose and concentrated effort can do . . . it is a lasting monument to the modern pioneering spirit of one of the leading organizations of our campus. . .

✧ The audience's view of the ampitheatre by moonlight . . . in summer, the semi-circle of seats fill with people who laugh at the heat, and enjoy musical programs, theatricals, and graduation exercises in comfort. . .

✧ This newly-completed, native stone field house is the latest addition to the athletic department . . . since student participation in school dances and school contests helped increase the field house "fund," every Southwesterner can feel that he has a share in this sturdy little building. . .

Neff Hall . . .

★ Here's where nearly two hundred Southwestern "eds" hang their hats . . . and the very latest in hat-hanging space it is, too . . . as spacious and modern as its counterpart, Stewart Hall, Neff Hall is home to students of important defense projects as well as to regular college students . . . and when all these Southwesterners of varied interests and talents get together in this bachelor's paradise, there aren't words to describe the mixture . . . unless you'd say—that's Neff Hall. . .

Stewart Hall . . .

☆ Although casual observers notice the beauty of Stewart Hall's architecture and landscaping, a lot of Southwesterners notice that the lawn is a nice place to rest in summer . . . and that the living room is an interior decorator's favorite dream . . . five-year-old Stewart Hall is the focal point of Southwestern's social activities . . . as well as the focal point of the attention of various Neff Hall residents. . .

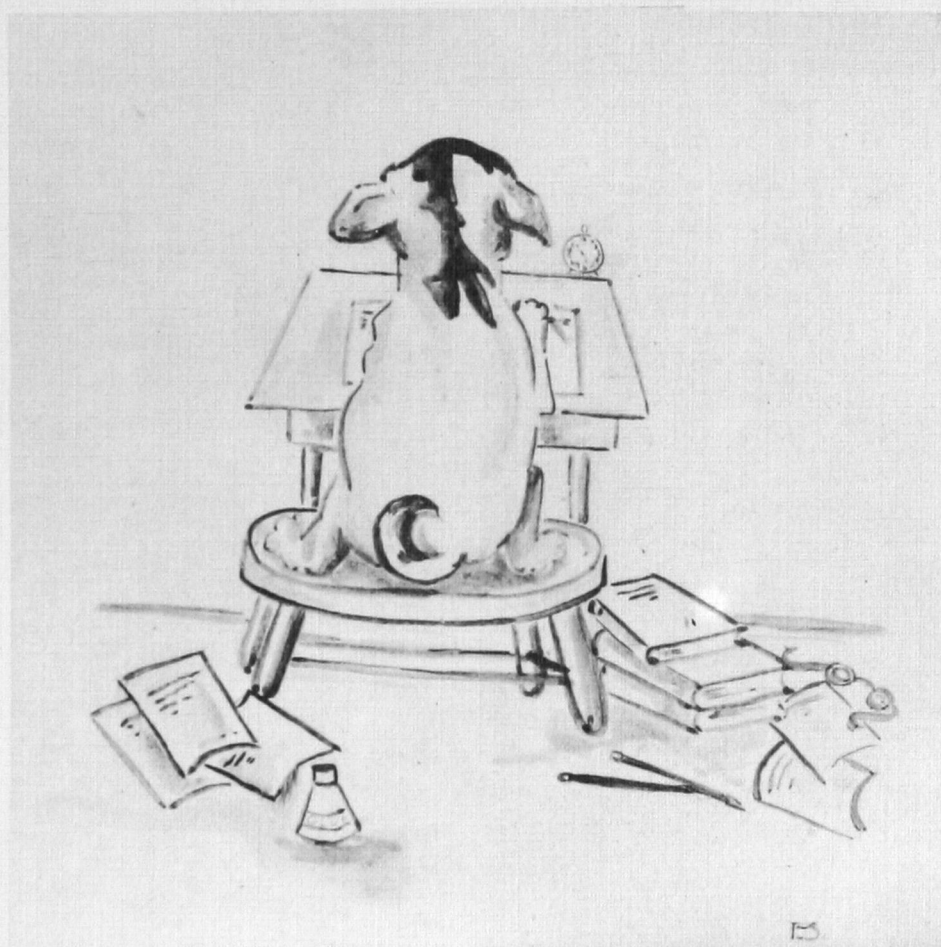

Administration Building . . .

☆ As a concrete example of Southwestern's Bulldog spirit, the new Administration Building is rising again over the ruins of the old. It is a long stride from the pile of blackened bricks to the shapeless piles of construction materials shown above—and it is even a greater step to the finished building, shown as an architectural sketch below. A look toward the hill will show every Southwesterner how near we are to the realization of the dream that this architectural sketch will be an actual photograph in next year's annual. . .

PUBLICATIONS . . .

Southwestern . . .

☆ Events from last Wednesday to this Wednesday, distilled in printer's ink—there's the Southwestern, Oklahoma's best senior college news sheet. Its contents vary from news yarns about the college front to a well seasoned mixture of Tech Talk . . . from a flash telling who your ex-heart-interest is now dating to a late bulletin on the progress of construction on the new Ad Building . . .

LOWER LEFT: Maurine Haynes, Reporter, and Lester Arnold, Photoengraving student.

LOWER RIGHT: Nina Rodriguez, Features.

Staff . . .

. . . from Collegiate Comedy to woo-path gossip . . . from society events to news of the latest gridiron triumph.

But a newspaper doesn't "just grow," like Topsy. Just in case you haven't realized who is responsible for such an excellent job—meet the people behind the "Southwestern." . . .

MIDDLE RIGHT: Ramey Wilson, Sports Editor.

LOWER LEFT: Kinley McClure, the lad who traversed the space from cub reporter to Business Manager in one year.

LOWER RIGHT: Loeta Allen and Olene Lee, Features.

The Bulldog Staff

J. R. WILLOWBY—Business Manager—sales—advertisements — deposits — collections — payments — bookbalancing — a man with an eye for technicalities, and one who puts great emphasis on being one hundred per cent exact.

DORIS STOCKWELL — Literary Editor — eulogy — poetry — information — statistics — features — a willing worker who places the value of co-operation far above long hours of labor.

Recipe for An Annual . . .

☆ Take one Bulldog staff and put to work early in September, burning midnight electricity diligently, alternately disputing and agreeing over the laboriously collected material. Assemble said ingredients, using a dash of originality, a sprinkle of artistry, and liberal quantities of elbow grease. Forget the hours of sleep that the staff didn't get while keeping its eyes steadily on the two guiding stars—the preceding annuals.

☆ "We are extremely grateful for the sincere, un-failing cooperation of Mr. Cletis T. Eskew, faculty adviser, and Mrs. Edna Muldrow, literary critic of the 1942 BULLDOG. We also appreciate the efforts of many students who have worked with us, but have resigned for various reasons. These include: Nellie Rose McCool, associate editor; Alvin Hand, sports editor; Maurice Cooper, literary editor; Don Eaton, publicity and advertising; and Jene Powell and Oneta Garvin, sales. However, the responsibility for this publication rests largely on those pictured here. I can truly say and feel that it has been a delightful experience to serve as your editor, and merely integrate the efforts of a willing and talented staff."

—GWM

BILL DOUGHERTY — Associate Editor — gets pictures taken — makes appointments — trims and mounts pictures — an excellent contact man.

. . . Season well with the ambition to make each book better than the book before . . . scorch the calendar with repeated glances as the deadline approaches, and at last—gaze unbelievably at the completed work . . . the cooperation of the faculty and student body keeps the mixture in perfect condition until publication . . . and so to bed.

G. W. MORRIS
Editor-in-chief

PATTIE STEWARD — Art Editor — sketches cartoons — paints landscapes — draws figures — a talented artist with a respect for deadlines and a remarkable sense of responsibility.

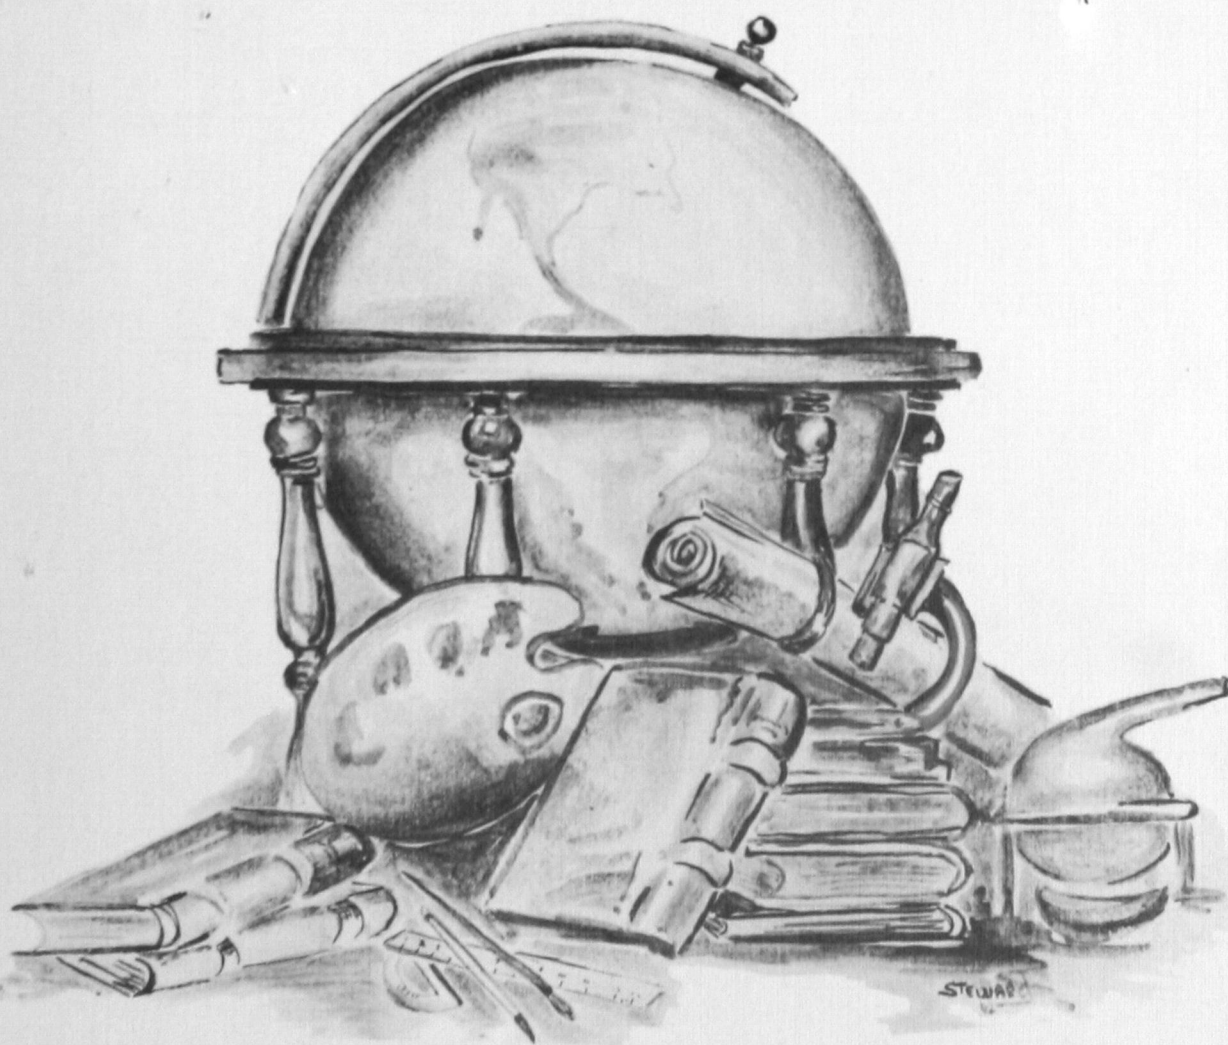

OUR FLAG is a symbol of things too intangible to be put into words—such things as live inside the heart. They are vital things . . . freedom to think as an individual . . . freedom to have ambition, and the right to hope for the realization of that ambition . . . freedom to live by laws that, wrong or right, are our own creation . . . freedom to discover for ourselves the value of our right to live in a great and a free nation. Even as the flag reminds us of these things, it also reminds us that rights are privileges, and privileges must be defended. . . .

Eager—inexperienced—a bit drunk with their new freedom, the freshmen stumble through the greenish haze that traditionally envelops them . . . the freshmen co-ed supports the manufacturers of sloppy Joe sweaters, while the bashful male frosh provides whistling concerts at the passing of the fairer co-eds . . . the freshmen often wait in the wrong room all hour while their class is being conducted three doors down . . . but they soon discover how much fun it is to “cut” the campus—and play Daniel Boone . . . how’s about it, Bill?

POST-GRADUATES . . .

☆ Back again on the campus of Southwestern Tech after a four-year pursuit of knowledge, our post-graduates add a dash of sparkle and a sprinkle of experience that would not be present otherwise. We are proud that they choose Southwestern to do their advanced study—proud that they feel that even after four years, Southwestern's campus still has much to offer them. . .

DOWN AND ACROSS: Winifred Dunn Alford, Mrs. Harvey L. Allen, Florence Bowie, Mrs. Tressie Verner Clary, Hazel Cox, Mrs. Vernelle Crelia Curtis, Grace Williamson, Loy J. Ferguson, Mrs. Lois Harris Hickerson, Grace North, Iris Yeargan.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION . . .

Pharmacy . . .

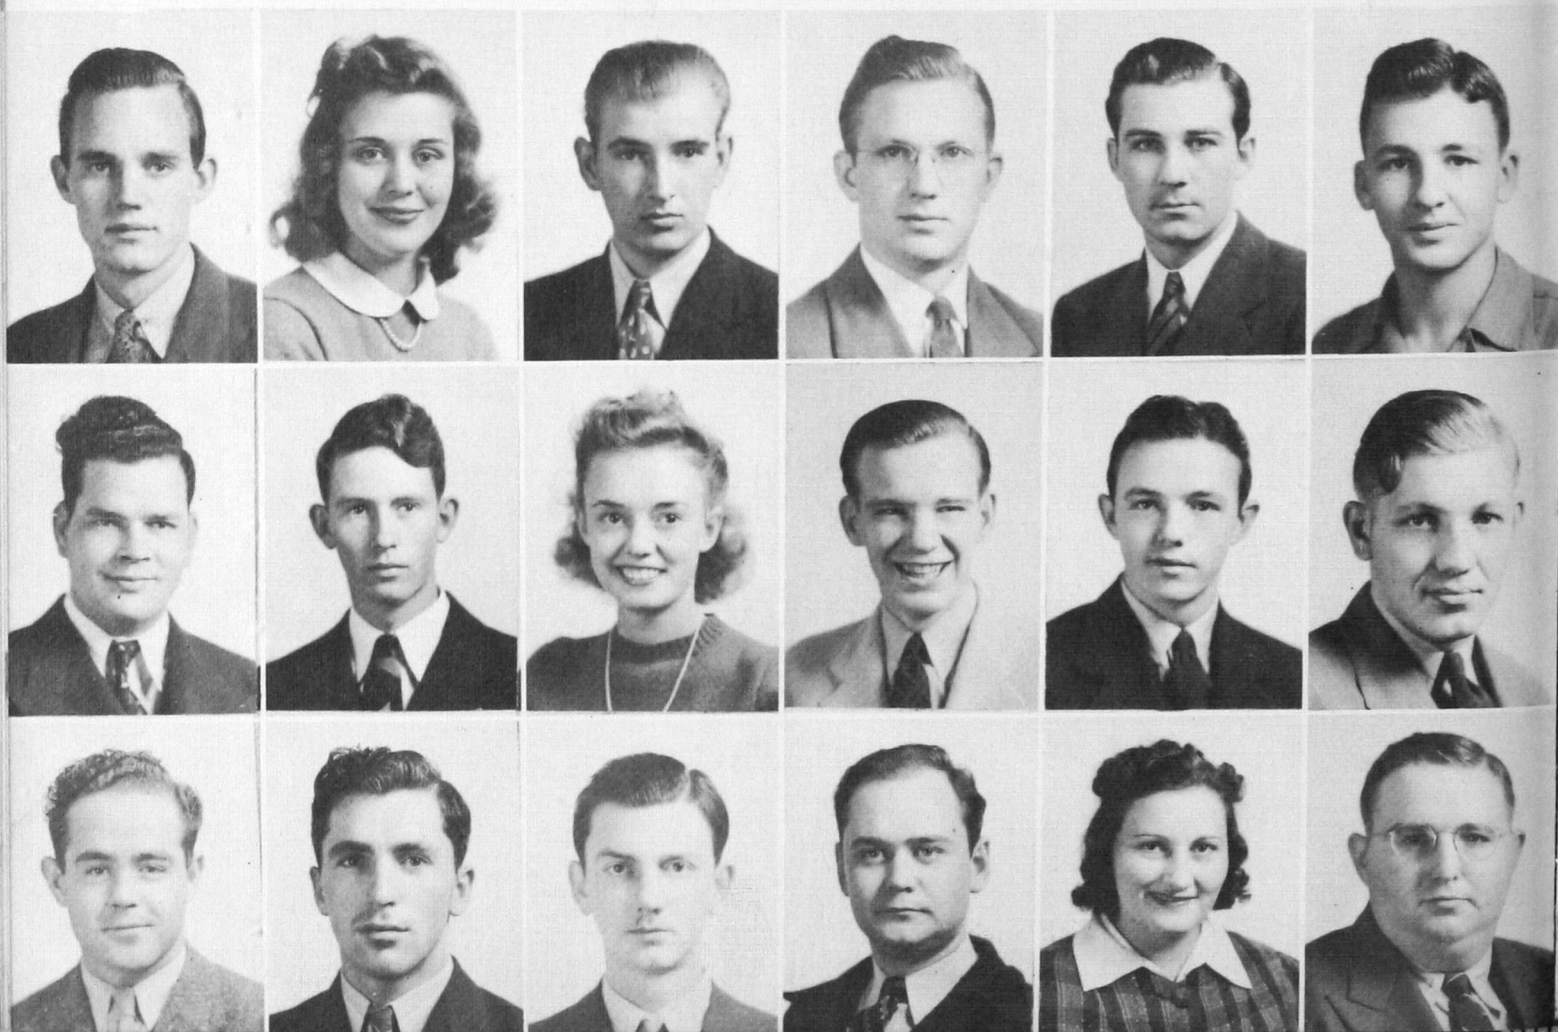

☆ Out of the inexplicable chemical changes that lie at the basis of the physical world will rise the world of tomorrow—a world brought into existence because of man's increasing knowledge and skills. One phase of this chemistry is the skill that enables one to take a piece of paper covered with symbols unintelligible to the layman, and translate it into a mixture of healing chemicals. This is magic in drug compounding . . . this is pharmacy . . .

FIRST ROW: Floyd Birden, Nina Branniger, Eldon Brewster, Bill Briscoe, Fred Byrd, Thel Campbell.

SECOND ROW: J. W. Conley, Raymond Dougherty, Glorine Godfrey, Ed Hamilton, O. D. Henderson, Lynn Henley.

THIRD ROW: Mike Higgins, Paul Huffman, Frank Kondos, Thomas Kunkler, Nellie Rose McCool, Robert McCroskie.

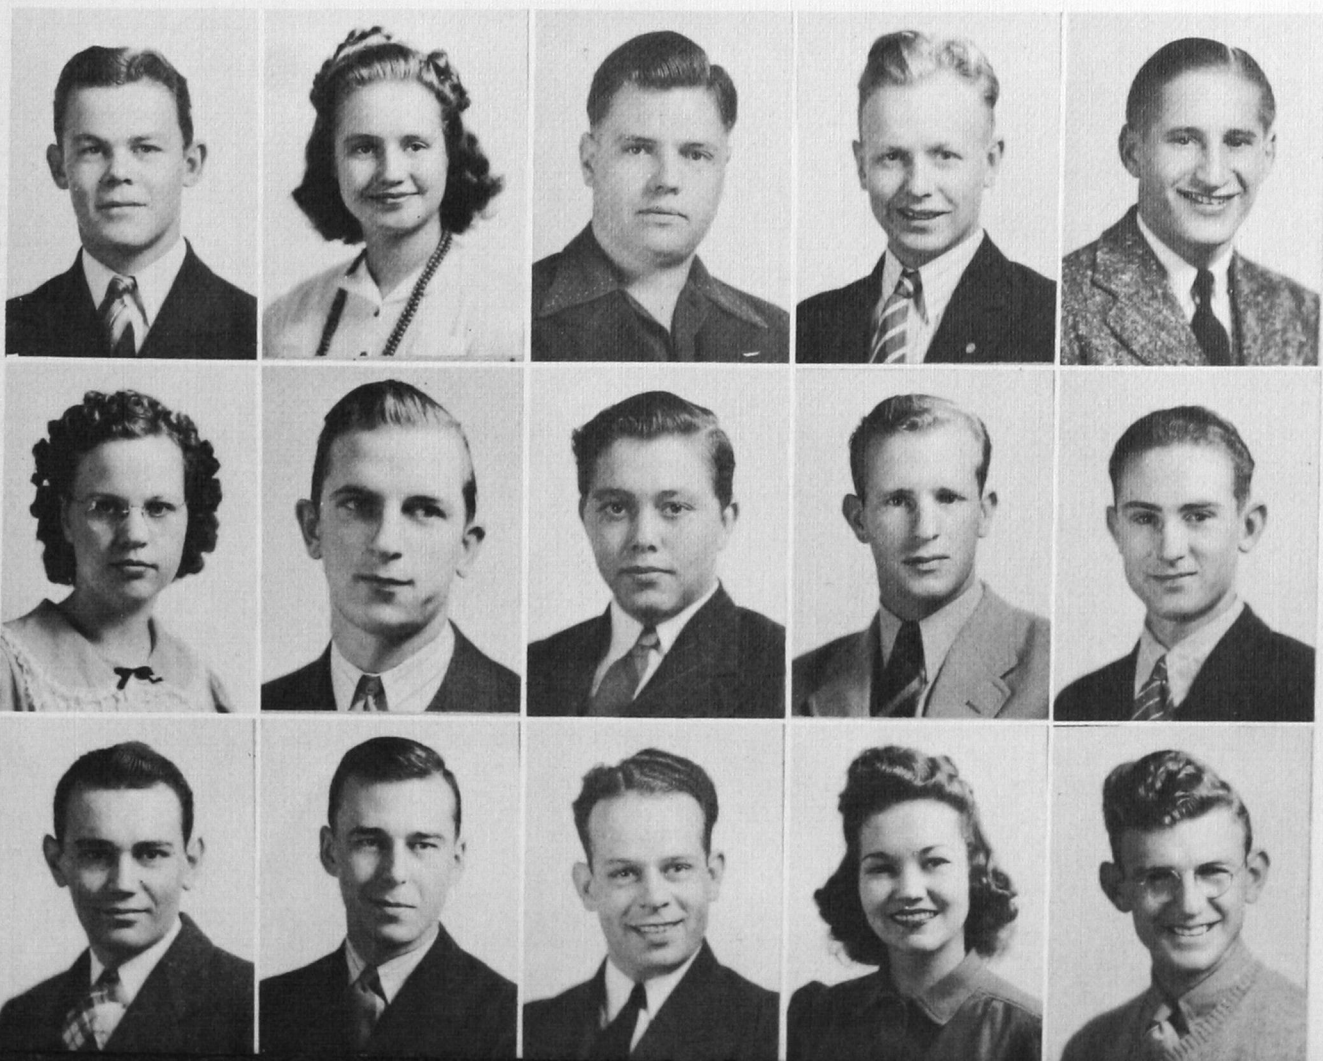

Pharmacy . . .

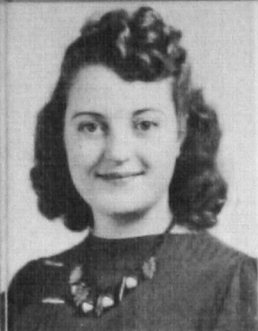

☆ Since there is an increasing need for this knowledge and skill, Southwestern Tech is justly proud of its pharmacy department, which has attracted students from over the entire Southwest. Modern equipment and competent instruction make it possible for these neophyte druggists to learn to make a better world—through pharmacy. . . .

FIRST ROW: Loyd McDown, Betty Milligan, Jone Milligan, Robert Parsons, E. Julius Rempfer.

THIRD ROW: Harry Waddle, Glenn Wilcox, Dick Williford, Ruth Wright, Raymond Yeargan.

Cosmetology . . .

☆ Established two years ago as a pioneer in Southwestern's ever growing group of vocational courses, the cosmetology department has gained prominence and popularity. Neophyte beauticians are given the advantages of the most modern equipment and the most competent instruction in both theory and practice of cosmetology. In the cosmetology laboratory, located in the Vocational Building, these co-eds practice the science of madame's manicure, and learn by practice the complications of the coiffure. In compliance with the state law, these Southwestern girls spend one-thousand hours in the pursuit of knowledge—three hours of laboratory to one hour of theory.

AT THE TOP: Roverta Barker.

FIRST ROW: Ethel Carothers, Pearl Carothers, Maxine Cartwright, Imogene Chambers, Louise Chambers, Hazel Clift.

SECOND ROW: Anna Lee Cox, Hazel Crothers, Norma Jean DeVerse, Betty Heatley, Bennie Faye Hix, Alline Jones.

☆ After the average seven months required to complete the course, the finished beauty operator knows the latest methods of hair-dressing . . . the hows and whys of permanent waving, both machine and machineless . . . the art of facials from mud-packs to honey masks . . . she is even on good terms with such technical processes as high-frequency, or the use of ultra-violet rays to treat skin diseases. She knows that personal appearance is of vital importance in the search for success, and that the skills that she possesses are increasingly in demand. . . .

AT THE TOP: Billye Wheeler.

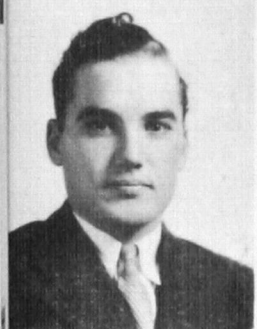

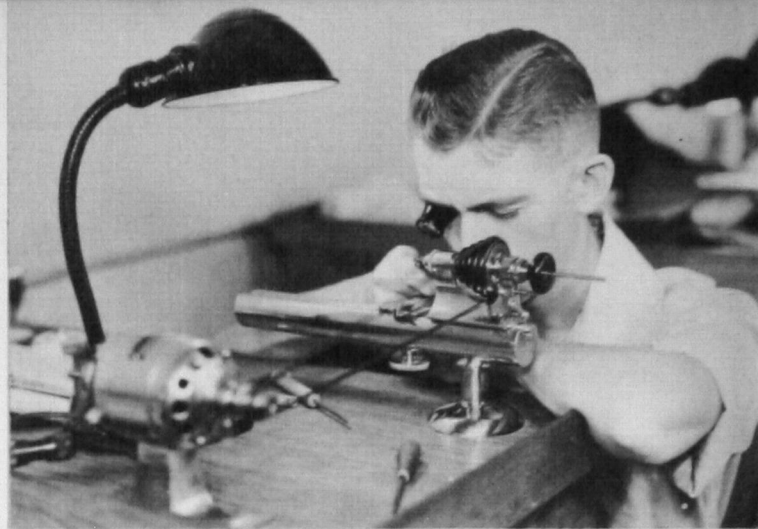

FIRST ROW: Hazel Jones, Anna McCullough, Jean Mitchell, Charlene Noble, Edith Prather, Edna Romans.

SECOND ROW: Kathryn Simpson, NaOla Smith, Thelma Spencer, Eunice Tibbles, Martha Warkentin, Winona Watson.

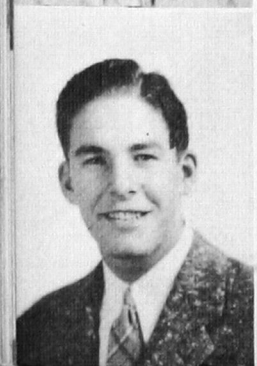

Horology . . .

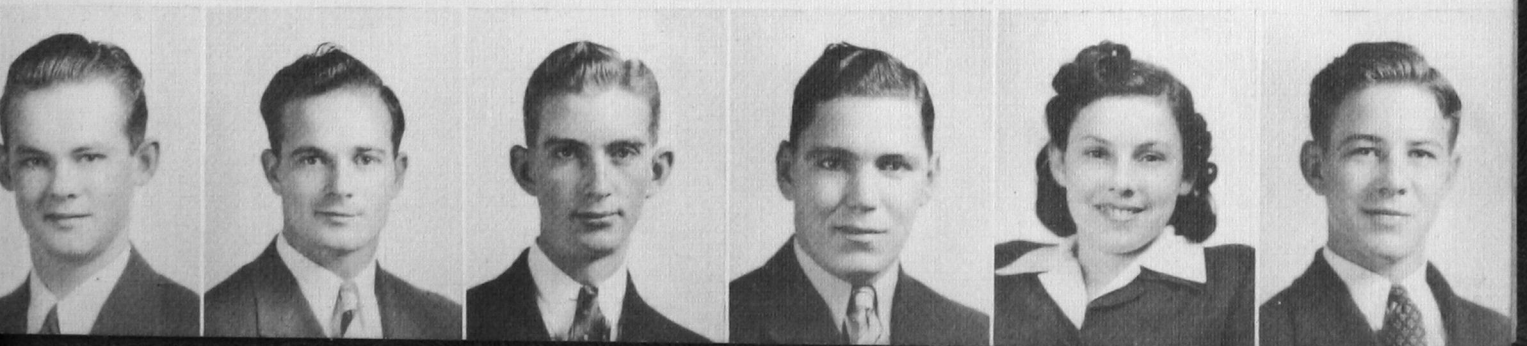

☆ Time marches on—and this group of students intend to do their bit to help it march on in perfect condition. Southwestern Tech claims the distinction of being the only college in the state to give its students the advantage of a Horology Department. This department, located in the Library, is divided into two sections—airplane instruments, and watch-making and repair. National defense has given the theory of instruments an increased importance, since knowledge of the installation and repair of the many delicate airplane instruments is necessary to keep wings over America . . .

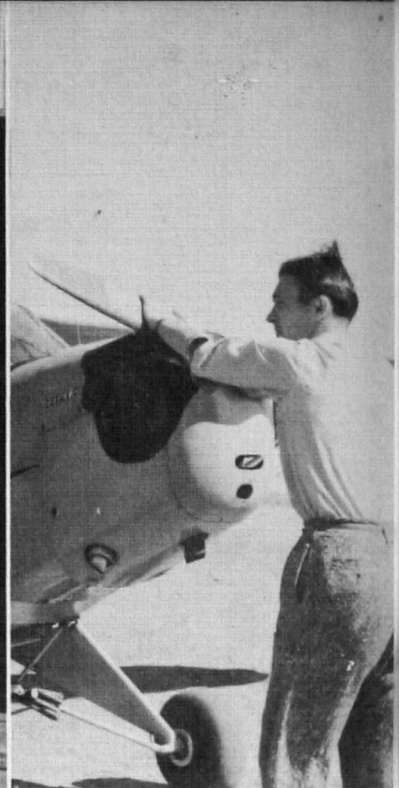

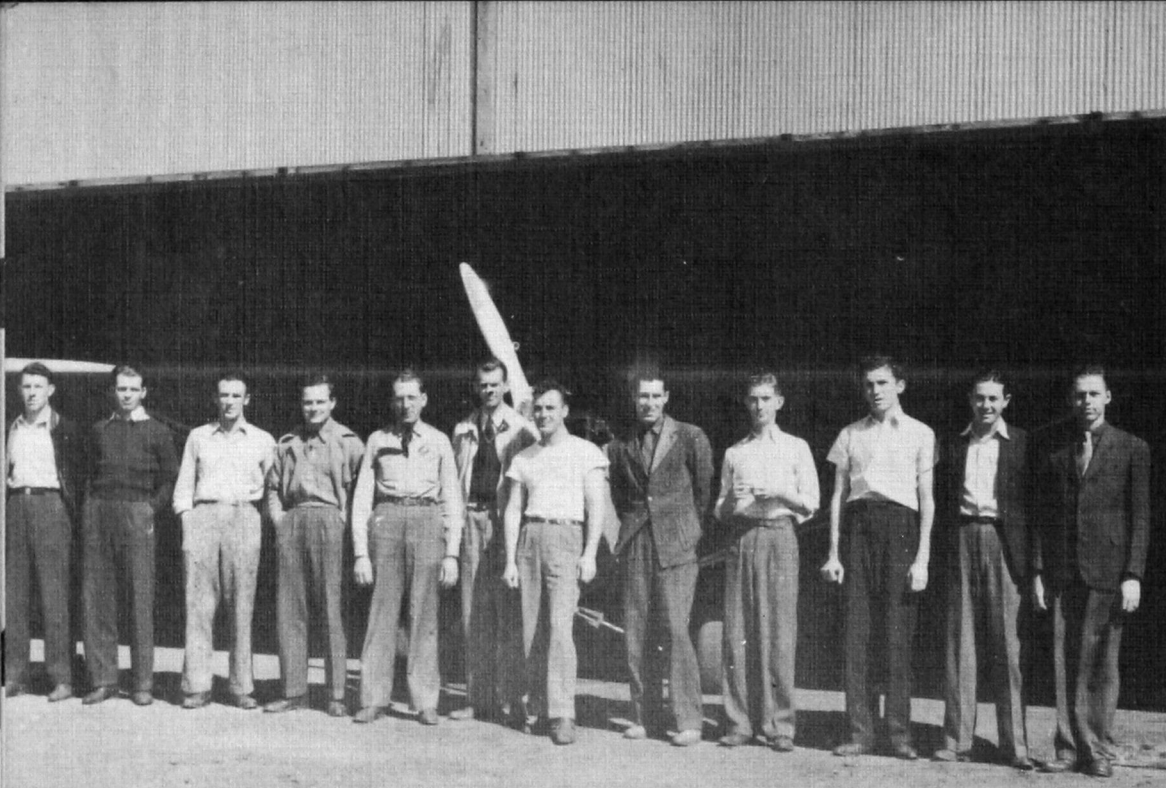

DOWN AND ACROSS: Leona Barclay, Fred Cheek, Ocie Cotter, Robert Herring, Chester Johnson, G. E. Jones, A. R. Maley, Ralph Murray, John T. Peterson, Joe Phillips, Homer Slover.

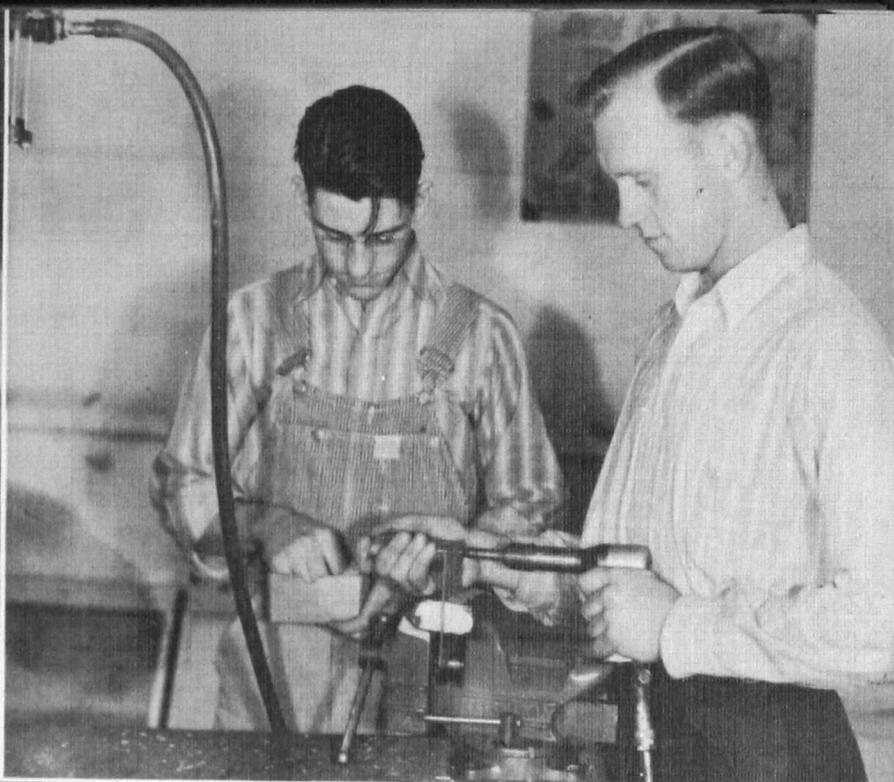

☆ With entirely new equipment and the most competent instruction, students learn to make parts for watches, to take watches apart, and, even more difficult, to put them back together again . . . to perform such delicate operations as to set jewels or true hair springs. Horology students have individual instruction and attention, and spend thirty-five hours a week at their benches learning by actual practice with Mr. Ibaugh constantly at hand to explain any difficulties. The department is open to both girls and boys, and either can become proficient in this highly remunerative line of work. The shop is open the entire year, but the average student completes the course in nine months. Since there is a real need for the skills acquired in this department, this new field is another example of Southwestern's growth and its making of new frontiers . . . another step toward a greater school. . . .

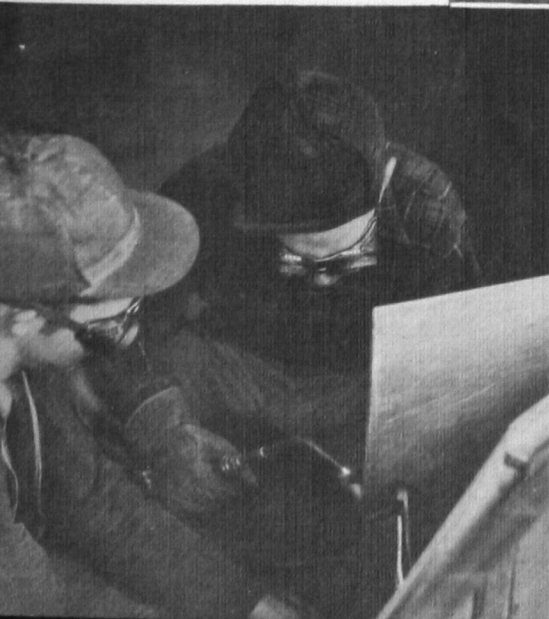

☆ Wings over Southwestern . . . aviators in the making . . . young men who will add to that all-important group of flyers who spread wings over America . . . A little less spectacular, but no less important, are those Southwesterners who stay on the ground and untangle the mysteries of electricity. . .

& The men behind the men behind the guns . . . helping to speed up the pace of national defense, our NYA Defense Project teaches young men and young women the most vital defense processes . . . this is another example of the part that Southwestern Tech plays in the defense of the ideals that it upholds. . . .

Vocational Commerce . . .

☆ In the Vocational Commerce Department, Southwesterners learn the skills that enable them to help keep the wheels of the business world whirling . . . a new forty-eight week course includes instruction in typing, shorthand, accounting, business ethics, and other related courses designed to turn out the perfect secretary or the model accountant.

. . . Southwesterners learn the intricacies of those modern hieroglyphics called shorthand—and they discover what magic two sets of flying fingers can work over a typewriter keyboard . . . for those who plan to stay longer in the department, there are advanced courses for prospective commercial teachers—if students can resist those Washington appointments.

. . . With national defense creating a vital demand for skilled commercial workers and teachers, these courses have gained a new importance and popularity, and are giving Southwesterners, enrolled in this department, the feeling of self-confidence that comes of the possession of good training and the knowledge that there is an increasing demand for that training . . . with the world of today placing such importance on efficiency and special training, Southwestern does its part in its excellent commercial department.

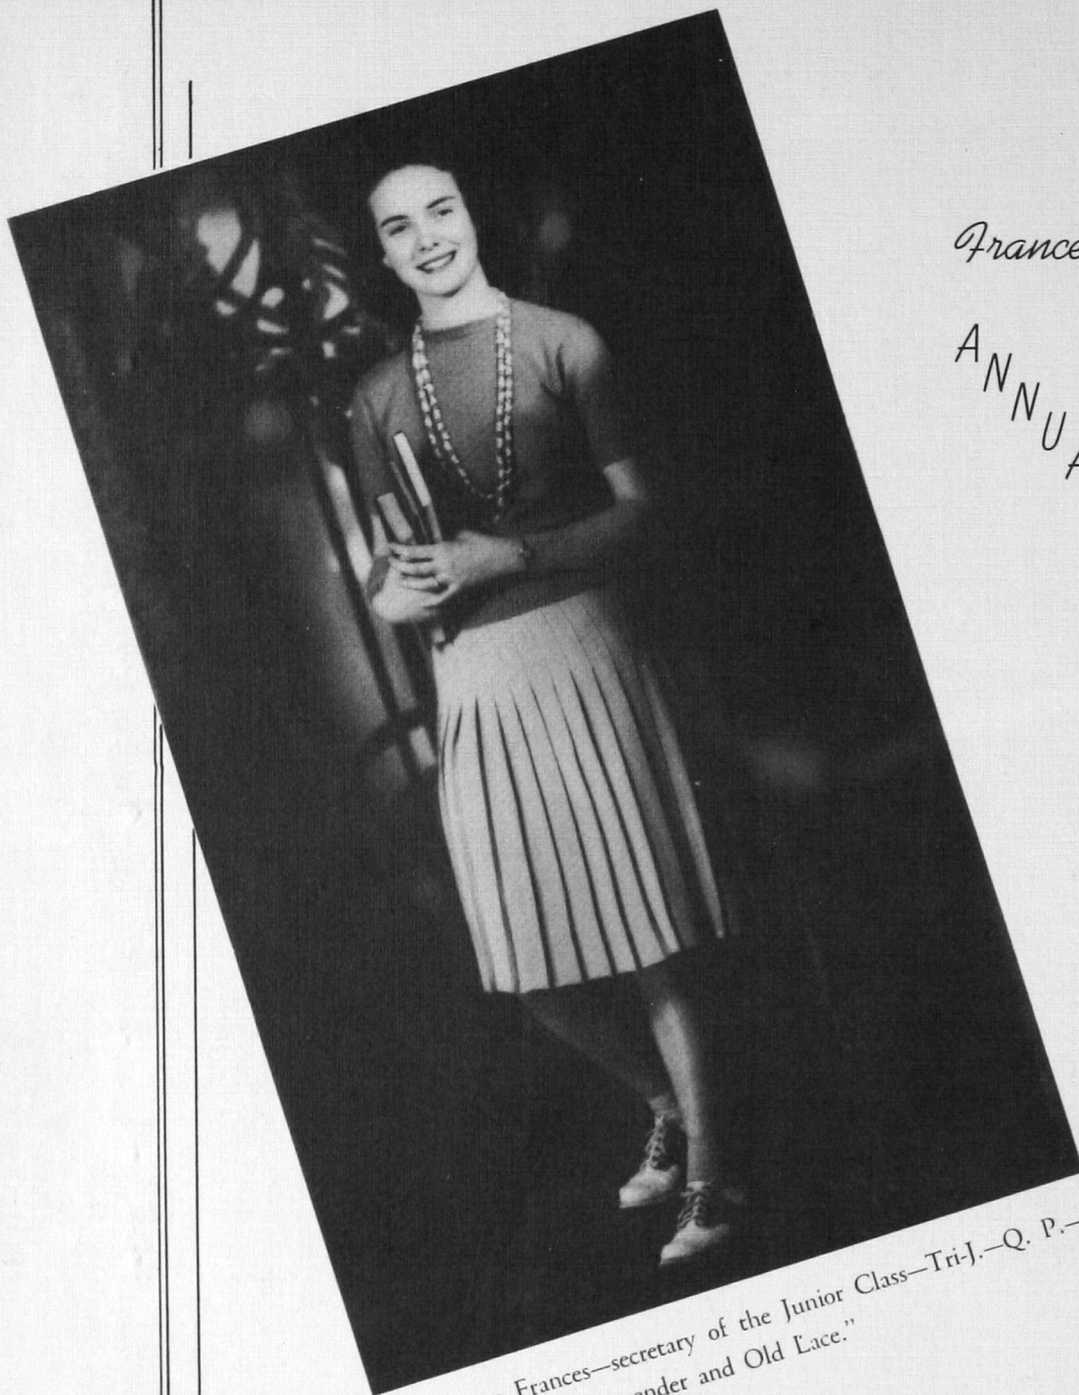

. . . Necessary apparatus for putting in those all-important calls between Stewart Hall and Neff Hall . . . those always active PBX operators whose theme song seems to be, "The calls must go through. . ."

ATHLETICS

Football . . .

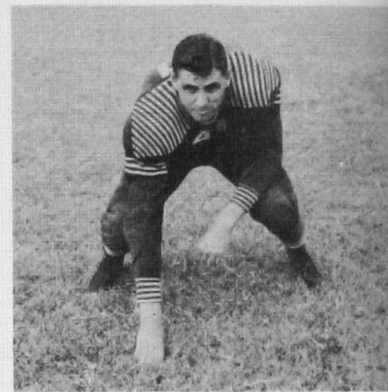

☆ The place of football in Southwestern can well be judged by the place of Southwestern's football squad in the conference standing. When it comes to collegiate all-stars, the Oklahoma coaches simply open the kennel gate and grab them as they go by. Here is Tech's contribution to the honorary line-up. All three—Springer, Hand, and Rhodes—were vital parts of that forward wall that launched a hornet defense and blitzkrieg offense to land the Bulldogs in the number two spot of the conference.

Reserves — reinforcements — rough — ready — raring to be regulars—and no doubt—they will be soon enough, for every good athlete must start on the 'grounded' floor under which are wooden blocks—namely, the bench—with a team like Tech's, only skilled men are permitted the privilege of warming the oak—often games are won by strategic substitution on the part of Coach Jake Spann. . . .

Women's Athletic Association . . .

☆ Athletics for Southwestern co-eds—it takes the steady nerve and the accurate eye of a William Tell to send the arrow winging straight to the bullseye—but with these Robin Hoods at the bow, it's a common everyday cinch—the steady concentration required by that American tradition, horseshoe pitching, is rivaled by the intense interest with which these co-eds watch the elusive basketball in this aerial view of the ladies' game of bounce, run, aim, and throw.

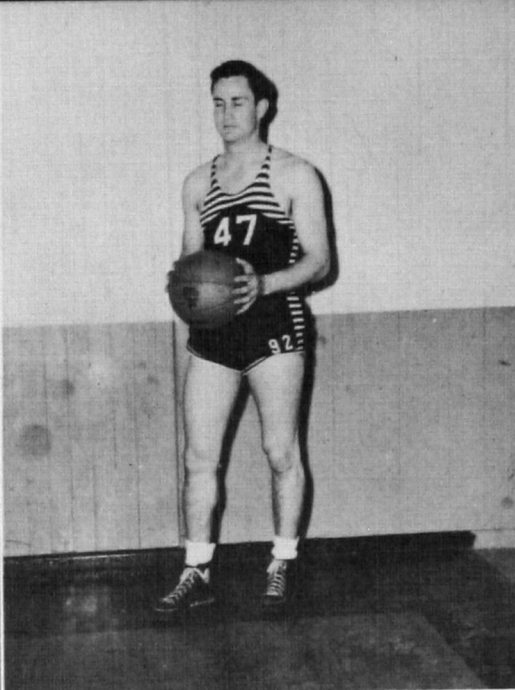

. . . The weaker sex takes over the baseball diamond, developing a fine muscle coordination and sense of distance—lookout for your laurels, Joe DiMaggio—the tennis courts are the most popular place on the campus on warm summer afternoons, where Southwesterners learn the art of manipulating a racquet—it's all in a "twist of the wrist," you know—and co-eds learn that there is an entirely foreign meaning of the term "love"—even bad weather can't stop tennis players, for they find Stewart Hall's game room as nice a place to play table tennis as one could find—these forms of recreation build sportsmanship as well as muscle for the women on Southwestern's campus.

☆ Stepping out to defend the privilege of good sportsmanship, Southwestern's seasoned basketballers answered the call of the colors, and left the Bulldog bucketing to a green, but game group of 'loop-lobbers'. Tech is proud of her cagers and their coach, Rankin Williams, for despite inexperience, they were able to stay out of the cellar and give the conference champs one of their three set-backs. Who loses that loses well?

Homecoming . . .

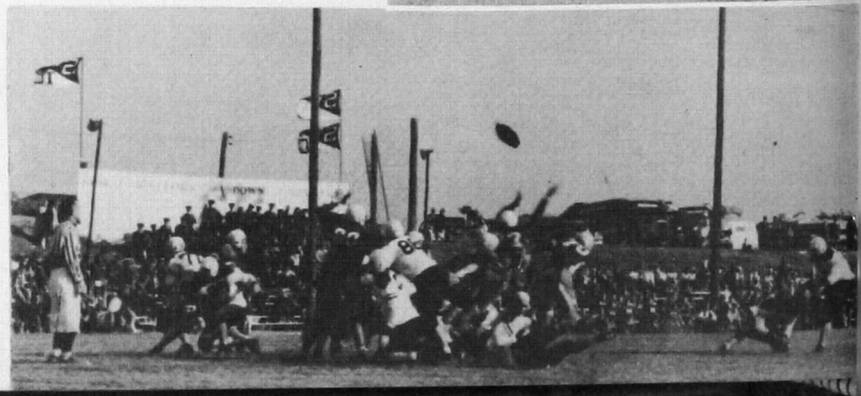

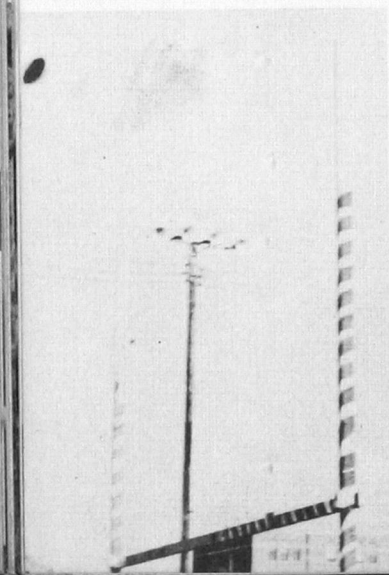

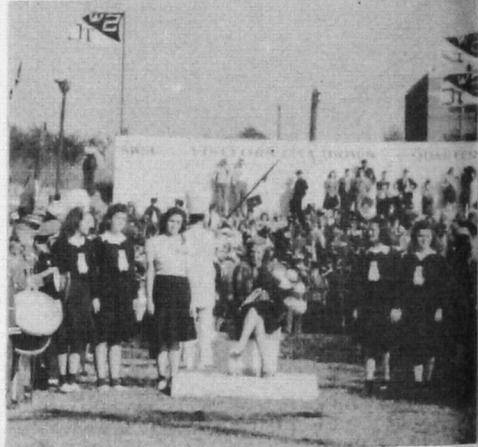

☆ Saturday, October 11, 1941, is the date on the calendar, but Southwesterners just say "Homecoming"—remember all the events of that exciting and crowded day?—familiar faces were back again—we watched the resplendent parade of bands and floats—the football queen was crowned.

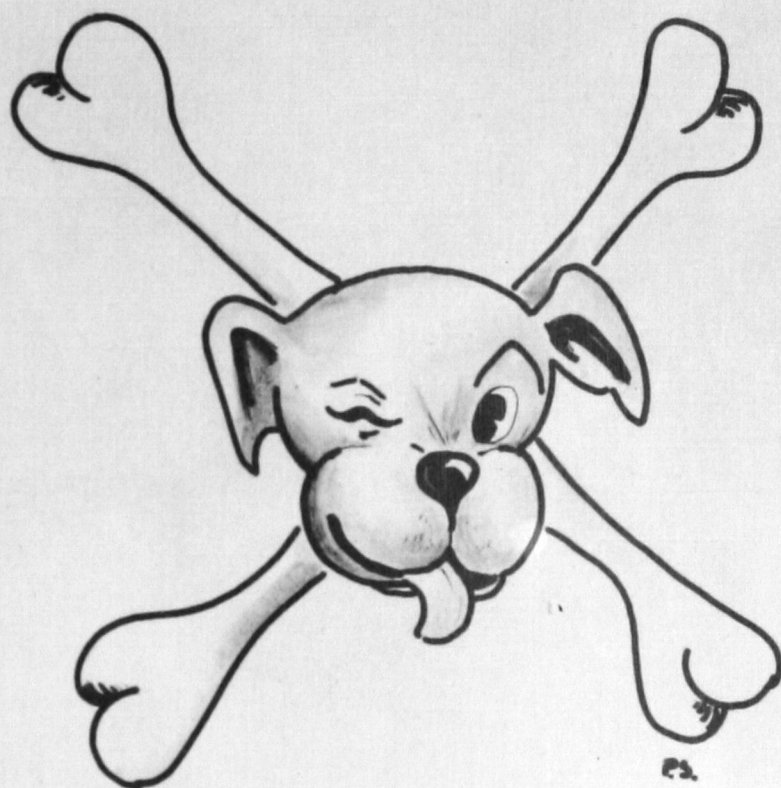

. . . And we won the gridiron battle with a spectacular play—a fitting climax to a memorable day.

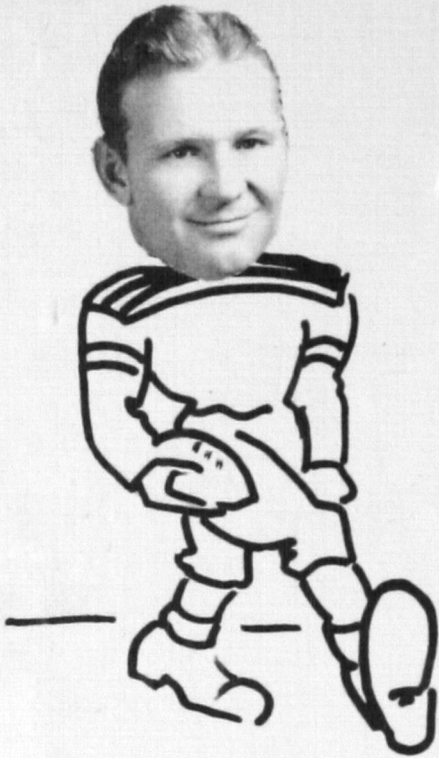

Below are two actual photographs of the winning field goal that made the day truly Southwestern's with a 3-0 win over Oklahoma City University.

POISONALITIES . . .

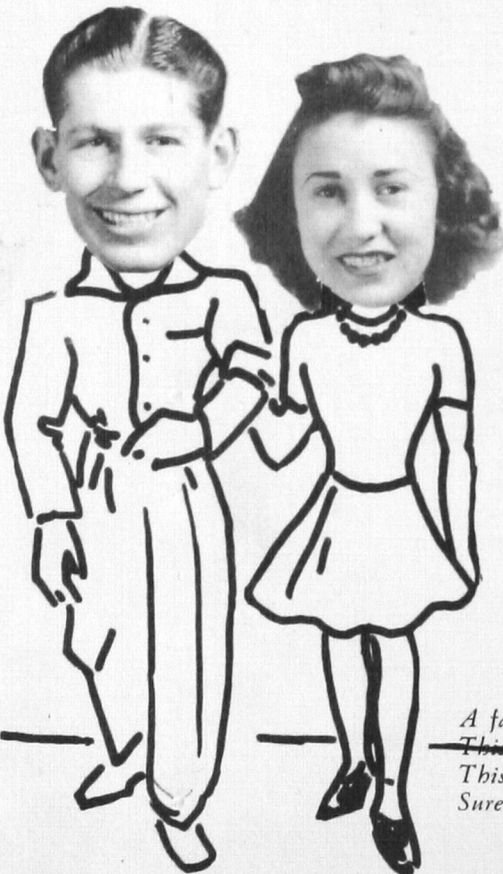

LEROY DUVALL

*I am known for my versatility—
Football to baseball is adaptability
I know the campus, nook and cranny,
And as for skating, I'm nobody's granny.*

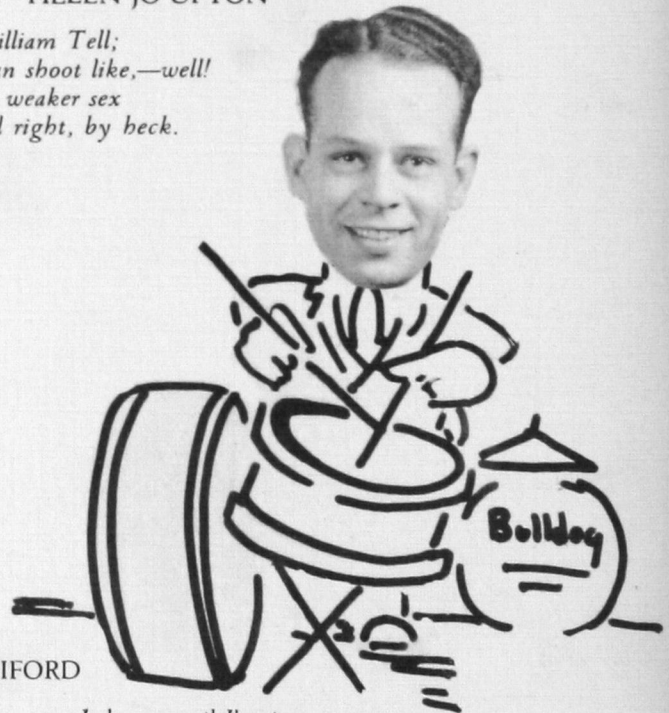

HELEN JO UPTON

*I'm a rival to William Tell;
Those arrows I can shoot like,—well!
Athletics and the weaker sex
Can get along all right, by heck.*

HAROLD SPRINGER AND MYRA HUNT

*A familiar sight, no doubt, to you,
~~This~~ football hero and Myra Sue . . .
This lass from Colorado State
Surely did grab Red the Great.*

DICK WILLIFORD

*I drum until I'm in a stupor
Southwestern has its own Gene Krupa . . .
Though with pharmacy I strive,
I am the king of the "jumping jive."*

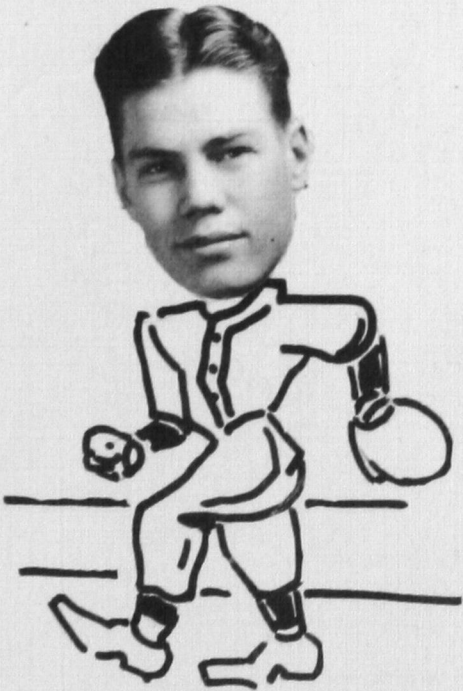

JOE WOODRUFF

*Ab, I'm Romeo, forsooth . . .
And though I hate to be uncouth,
I find one simply has to pet,
To find one's lovely Juliet . . .*

JOY SHOCKLEY

*I'm ex-sob-sister; now the "ed"—
In fact, I rarely see a bed . . .
Your college rag sure takes the toil—
Just take a look at that midnight oil!*

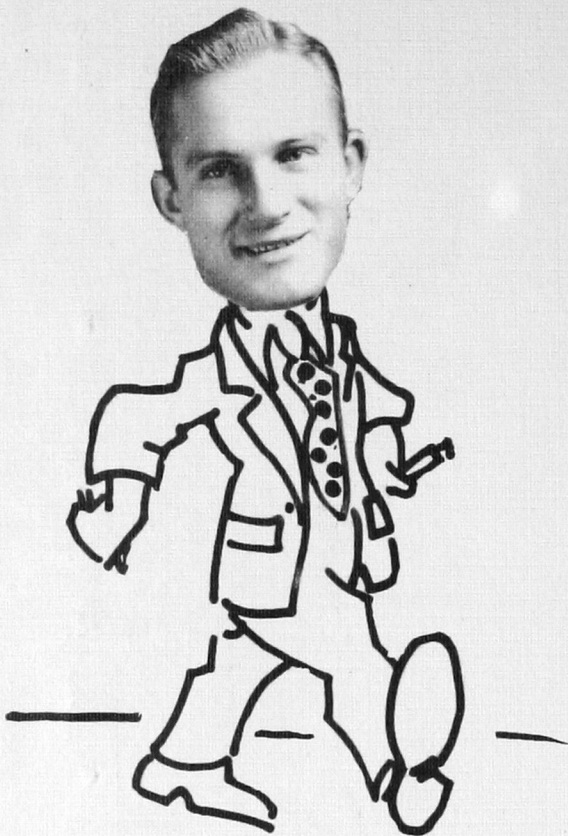

VERNON McCLENDON

*I'm the campus baseball fiend,
Next of kin to Dizzy Dean . . .
Though I'm just a freshman "Diz"
On the diamond I am a whiz . . .*

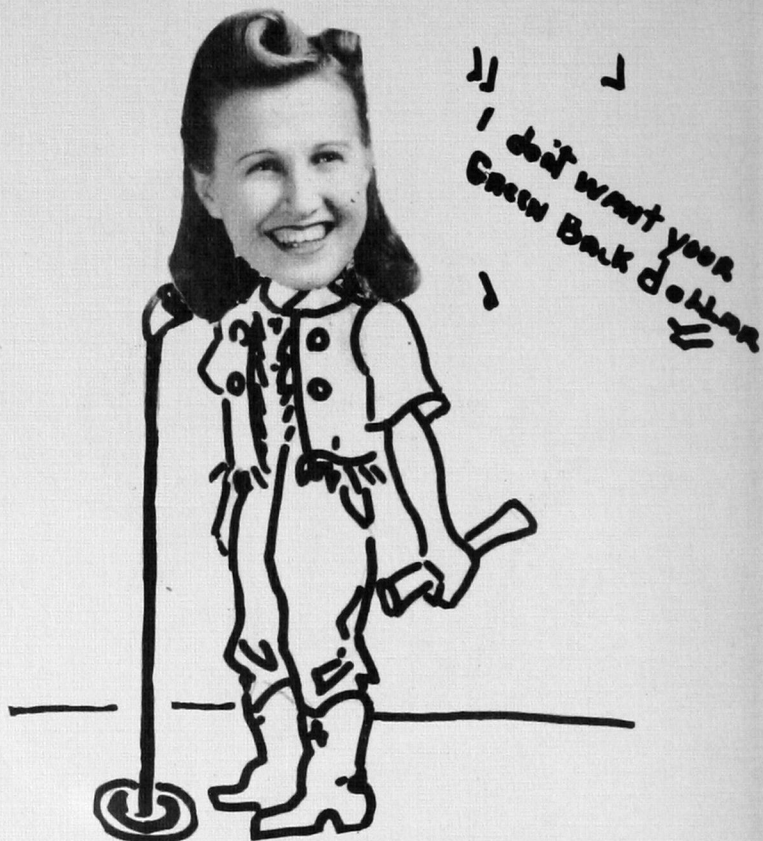

KENNETH BRADY

*I'm the campus Casanova—
The girls just follow me all ovah
You may think it's my physique,
But really, girls, it's my technique!*

RAMEY WILSON

*I'm Southwestern's Winchell, Walter
(This rhyming really makes me falter)
Though I'm just a little squirt.
Boy, I sure can dish the dirt!*

IRIS SAVAGE

*Talent, wit, and lots of dancing,
Charm, poise, even romancing : .
Just like a jumbled dictionary
Sav's so darned un-customary!*

DOROTHY HOLDEN
and WESLEY LOGAN

*Take a co-ed—(football queen)
Add handsome man—(boy, this is keen)
These two play a game of doubles
With never any lover's troubles.*
