

SWOSU Library Planning Event on Books That Have Changed Your World

02.22.2006

In celebration of National Library Week coming up April 2-8, the Al Harris Library at Southwestern Oklahoma State University in Weatherford is sponsoring an exhibit and program on "Books That Have Changed Your World."

SWOSU faculty are invited to share books that have influenced their lives over the years. The deadline to submit information is this Friday, February 24.

Faculty members who would like to participate in this special event should provide name, position title, basic bibliographical information (author, title, publisher, date), and the reasons this particular book has been influential. Information can also be submitted on the form provided at <http://www.swosu.edu/library/infoservices/promos>.

Please submit information to linda.pye@swosu.edu.

The submissions will be displayed as part of the National Library Week exhibit at the Al Harris Library.

This theme coincides with the American Library Association's theme for National Library Week, "Change Your World @ Your Library."
