Milam and Surbeck Will Enter SW Hall of Fame at April 20 Banquet

Joe B. Milam and Marion H. Surbeck, the only two coaches ever to bring national championships to Southwestern State College, will be inducted into the Southwestern Hall of Fame on April 20.

Tickets to the installation banquet, scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Memorial Student Center ballroom, have gone on sale at $2.50 each at the college business office.

Richard A. (Dick) Moore, Southwestern graduate from Altus, will be master of ceremonies for the event. Moore is vice-president of the Oklahoma-Kansas division of the Arkansas-Louisiana Gas Co.

While both Milam and Surbeck coached other athletic teams at Southwestern, their wrestlers brought fame to the college.

Milam assumed football and wrestling coaching duties in the fall of 1926. That first season his football team won the Collegiate Conference championship.

Under the new coach, wrestling soon developed into one of the college's leading sports, and from 1927 to 1933 many state and conference champions were produced.

In 1933 Southwestern won the National AAU team championship in Chicago, Ill., and repeated the feat a year later at Ames, la.

During the years 1938 through 1934, Milam's teams won 32 and lost nine dual meets. Individual placings included two firsts, four seconds and three thirds in the NCAA; seven firsts, three seconds and one third in the AAU, and 21 firsts out of 32 entries in the Collegiate Conference.

Two of his wrestlers were members of Olympic Teams -- Steve England and Ralph Teague. Teague was inducted into the Southwestern Hall of Fame in 1965.

Milam continued as coach at Southwestern until 1936, and then taught history and agriculture here until 1938.

The college stadium is named for Milam in recognition of his efforts in raising money for, and in helping in the construction of, the football field.

Since 1950, Milam and his wife, Lillian, have lived in Victoria, Texas, where they own rental property. The 69-year-old former coach was born in Amorita, Okla., and still spends much of his time there.

Surbeck, who now is director of the physical plant, maintenance and operation at Eastern Washington State College at Cheney, also boasts two National AAU wrestling team championships --- won in 1937 at Baltimore, Md., and in 1939 at San Francisco, Calif.

A Caddo County native, he was born at Cement in 1905.

Surbeck came to Southwestern in 1935 as wrestling coach and line football coach, and succeeded to the head football coaching job in 1939, his last year here.

During 1935-36 the college placed two men on the Olympic wrestling team. The following year, in addition to winning the AAU championship, Southwestern took the Collegiate Conference crown.

In 1937-38 Surbeck's wrestlers again won the conference title and tied for fourth place in the National ICAA. They repeated as AAU and conference titlists in 1938-39.

Surbeck accepted his present position at Eastern Washington State in 1946.

Milam and Surbeck are the first two Hall of Fame inductees selected for their coaching records at Southwestern. They will be honored at the April 20 banquet, and their names will be added to the list of inductees as published in HALL OF FAME, Page 8.

Statistics tell us that 20 per cent of the people living in the United States move to a new address each year.

We point this out in explaining why information printed on these pages about you and your former classmates could be outdated by the time Echoes is delivered.

Letters requesting personal data were sent last August to everyone on this newsletter's mailing list. The response was overwhelming, and enough replies were received to fill many, many Echoes From the Hill.

For that we thank you. But, at the same time, we must ask your indulgence. As many personal tidbits about alumni are published in each issue of Echoes as space permits; still, there's a stack of letters waiting to be put into print.

Take heart—your name may appear in the next issue, or the next, or the next. If by the time it does you are on another job or in another place, please be understanding.

Early Wilsons In ‘Light’ Business

BY ETHEL G. WILSON
5906 East Baker
Tucson, Ariz.

We read with interest your recent publication, “Echoes from the Hill,” and look forward to receiving future editions.

The writer was graduated from SWSTC in the spring of '32 with a BS degree, having majored in business administration and minored in public school art. I was a member of Tri-J, Forensia and a charter member of Alpha Iota, national honorary business sorority.

Since graduation I have worked as bookkeeper for a chain department store, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and in the overseas department of the Signal Corps at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio. I am presently associated with my husband in the electric light plant business in Tucson, Ariz.

My husband, Earl Wilson, a native son of Weatherford, also attended SWSTC during the years '29-30. He was associated with his father, the late E. E. Wilson, in the electric light plant business.

In 1934 we moved to Amarillo, Texas, where he was associated with Cowie Electric. Then he became regional sales manager for Wind-Charge Corp, which took us to San Angelo and San Antonio, Texas. In 1959 he started in the light plant business for himself.

During World War II he was chief of engine test at Wright Field. He travelled over the U.S. and South America as trouble-shooter on production lines at 13 major air depots.

When the war was over he returned to the light plant business in San Angelo, Texas, and in 1953 established the present business called WILCO in Tucson, where we distribute and maintain Witte Diesel Light plants to resorts, ranches and commercial users.

He is an A&E mechanic and has flown his own plane since 1934, having first soloed in Amarillo. Flying four times more than driving, he finds it easy to provide service within three hours to any of his far-flung operating plants in Arizona, New Mexico and California.

He, also, carries a working permit for Old Mexico and finds much pleasure in doing business with our friends south of the border.

He has more recently completed the rigid requirements for a “General Ham” license and is presently working toward his First Class Commercial. This has opened up an entirely new field and enables him to operate in close contact, either mobile or from his “ham station” at home.

Up until three years ago we made frequent trips to Weatherford to visit my mother, the late Mrs. J. H. Gaddis. Although we no longer have family there, we do keep in touch with our many friends, among whom are your fine President and Mrs. Al Harris.

Our family consists of one cat named Gatita, which means little cat in Spanish, and whose delightful antics never cease to amuse us.

Dr. Anderson Sees Viet Nam War

(Prof. Roy W. Anderson, Cordell physician and a 1932 graduate of Southwestern State College, has discussed his stay in South Viet Nam, in appearances before many civic organizations and other groups. At Echoes' request, he submitted the following article for publication.)

By ROY W. ANDERSON, M.D.

In all of us there is an innate desire to contribute something of value to the less fortunate and suffering humanity. This motivation, on my part, together with a desire to gain some first-hand, on the scene information concerning the over-all picture in Southeast Asia, prompted me to offer my services on a volunteer basis for a 60-day assignment in Viet Nam.

This volunteer Civilian Physician's Program is under the auspices of the USAID Agency, and is sponsored by the American Medical Association.

Following a 24-hour stopover in Hong Kong, I arrived in Saigon on the 3rd day of October, and was immediately assigned to the Can Tho civilian hospital. Can Tho is the fourth largest city in South Viet Nam, with a population of approximately 90,000. It is the headquarters for the Fourth Military District and is located about 90 miles south of Saigon, in the Mekan Delta.

The civilian hospital here has 450 beds and is one of the better hospitals in Viet Nam. This 450-bed hospital has an average daily census of well over 600 patients. In many instances two and sometimes three patients occupied the same bed. Ninety per cent of the patients were civilian war casualties; mostly women and children.

Can Tho has suffered a population explosion, of a sort, during the past two or three years. Prior to 1965 their population was approximately 35,000.

The influx of population has been due to such factors as refugees from North Viet Nam, and peasants who have been forced to leave their rice paddies in the nearby rural areas, and, perhaps, the greatest single factor has been the "American War Dollar" coming into town. Prosperity and inflation abound. The people were well dressed and I saw very little evidence of malnutrition in this area. The streets were crowded beyond imagination with motorized vehicles; mostly three-wheeled Cyclus and Honda's.

I was proud to have been counted as one of them during my tour of duty. I have never worked harder and I have never had a greater reward in the feeling of satisfaction resulting from my efforts.

As to our military operations in Viet Nam, I have many reservations. We have relative security in isolated areas... the control of the Viet Cong. Fifty per cent of the civilians in Can Tho are either Viet Cong or Viet Cong sympathizers.

I have seen the mixed expressions of fear and hatred on the faces of patients following a mortar attack or a mine explosion. Many of them feel that if we had not been there the tragedy would not have happened.

All travel in Viet Nam is by air. Any attempt to go between towns by road or by highway, either by day or by night, would be inviting tragedy.

We are a long way from achieving our purpose in Southeast Asia. In short, we are not, by any stretch of the imagination, winning the war in Viet Nam.

Jim Adkins (BS, '66) of Clinton is an accountant in the uranium department of Kerr-McGee. He and his wife, Jenny (BS, '66) of Marlow, live at 1000 Cornwell, Apt. 212, Yukon.

Miss Riggs on Staff of Scientific Lab

LOS ALAMOS, N.M.—Miss Laurina Mae Riggs of Stratford, Texas, has recently joined the staff of the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in New Mexico to work in the field test division.

"Last May I delivered 13 commencement and baccalaureate addresses to graduating high school and college classes," she added.

Just what does a college public service director do?

Most of his talks are centered around education. He most frequently speaks to professional groups such as the Oklahoma City Artists' Guild, Farmers Union, Farm Bureau and vocational agriculture teacher's meetings. However, civic and service clubs, local school organizations and religious groups also engage him.

Since he holds a bachelor of divinity degree and a doctor of theology degree, he is also often asked to fill the pulpit in area churches.

He travels to Texas and Kansas four or five times a year for special programs.

His other duties as public service director include arranging speaking engagements for other Southwestern faculty members and hosting campus visitors.

Besides this "full-time" job, Dr. Sill spends 14 hours a week in the classroom teaching introduction to philosophy, old testament survey each fall semester, and New Testament literature in the spring.

During his past eight years at SWSC, he has taught English composition, speech, debate, advanced philosophy and ethics. He was also director of forensics five years.

During the summer, he is on the faculty at the Army Chaplain School, Fort Hamilton, New York.

A graduate of Southwestern State has been chosen by Gov. Dewey Bartlett as the new state superintendent of education.

Dr. D. D. Creech, who received his bachelor's degree from the college in 1938, will replace the late Dr. Oliver Hodge in the $19,500-a-year position, superintendent of schools at Pryor since 1960, Dr. Creech holds a master's degree from Oklahoma State University and a doctor's degree from the University of Oklahoma.

After graduating from Southwestern, he took his first job teaching social studies at Canton. He later taught at Mutual.
