

Writer and Film Maker Diane Glancy to be Featured at SWOSU Westview Writers Festival

04.08.2010

Writer Diane Glancy will deliver a presentation at the 18th Annual Westview Writers' Festival this Monday, April 12, at Southwestern Oklahoma State University in Weatherford.

The festival starts at 7 p.m. in the Conference Center, located at the corner of Seventh and Davis Streets, on the SWOSU campus.

Glancy has won numerous awards for her prolific writings in fiction, poetry and drama.

Lately, she has devoted much of her energy to the making of films. In her works, she draws from her unique perspectives as a person of Cherokee and English-German descent. Glancy will read from some of her work, speak about her experiences as a writer, and show a short clip of a film currently in production. She will also take questions from the audience.

SWOSU Assistant Professor Jim Silver said the public is invited and admission is free. Refreshments will be provided. For additional information, contact Silver at 580.774.3242.
