

SWOSU Blue White Game This Monday Being Played in Unusual Setting

04.16.2010

Southwestern Oklahoma State University's annual Blue-White spring football game will be played this Monday, April 19, in an unusual setting.

The game is set for 7 p.m. at Weatherford High School. It is being held there because of the ongoing artificial turf project at Milam Stadium. Head Coach Dan Cocannouer is excited about the upcoming switch to turf.

"The turf will be awesome," Cocannouer said. "Our players won't be as affected by poor weather conditions, and our field will look so much better."

For Monday's game, the Bulldog team has been divided into two separate squads that will square off in a scrimmage that will conclude this year's spring practices. The public is invited to attend the game, and admission is free.
