The Care Map

Robert Sam Lackey

Follow this and additional works at: https://dc.swosu.edu/westview

Part of the Fiction Commons, Nonfiction Commons, Photography Commons, and the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://dc.swosu.edu/westview/vol33/iss1/28

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at SWOSU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Westview by an authorized administrator of SWOSU Digital Commons. For more information, please contact phillip.fitzsimmons@swosu.edu.
The Care Map

by Robert Sam Lackey

When endless anger and neglect
Are spread by bitterness
That joins with mindless lust
To spread deep numbness
To the cells . . . all turning in,
To back away from this Assault.
The loving Gardener first
Must sweep away the splinters
And the shards so gently that they
Slide out harmless
To the edge,
Then safely well beyond.

And since it is the person
Head to toe that bore these blows,
From head to toe
The Gardener proceeds
With loving touch to reassure each cell
That peace has come
And they can turn
And safely listen
To a song of simple joy.

No other goal than welcoming
All of those hiding,
While the bombs rained down
And sirens screamed of new waves
Coming in.
Once coaxed out from the dark,
The Gardener moves on,
Until the last leaf turns toward the sun.
His job is clear, to cover everything,
And nothing else.
No hidden shards still buried
Just beneath the skin.
No scars grown numb from searing looks.

Just every inch awakened and assured
The time has come.
To grow within a love that
Loves that growth,
Far more
Than anything.