The Muse Returns

by Daniel R. Schwarz

“I am in an elegiac mood, nostalgic for what should have been,
anxious to mourn days gone by,
to find paths not taken,
words not said;
I need to drink from dregs of regret and loss.”

“Let us not live in the world of what if or might have been or I should have and could have,
and almost or but....
She’s gone and it’s time to build a tomorrow.

“I need to scold and blame myself and suffer romantic agony.”

“Ah poor man,
there you go again.
Revel in the world’s delicious cornucopia of pleasures;
each day’s a harvest, banquet, and bouquet.”
