At the McNay Museum

by Bonnie Lyons

I blinked and squinted past a gray silk suit into the face of the museum director whom a kindly guard had asked to check on me—the woman lying motionless on the ground might have overdosed, might be dead—sprawled out on the sweet spring grass following the play of wind and sun on a mobile sculpture until the dappling light carried me off to sleep.

A cool, cloudless afternoon, but women of a certain age don't lie down on the grass. With a blanket beneath me I'd have been less objectionable.
Cowboys have bedrolls, nomads have tents.
Something, however flimsy, must separate us from ground and sky, mark and make our human place. I was a mare or cow who simply folds her legs and lies down in any pasture.
Momentarily at home on planet earth.
