

11-15-2007

The Widow Burden Meets William Eagle Feather Outside of Gold Creek

Robert Cooperman

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview>

 Part of the Fiction Commons, Nonfiction Commons, Photography Commons, and the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Cooperman, Robert (2007) "The Widow Burden Meets William Eagle Feather Outside of Gold Creek," Westview: Vol. 26 : Iss. 2 , Article 32.

Available at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview/vol26/iss2/32>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at SWOSU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Westview by an authorized administrator of SWOSU Digital Commons. For more information, please contact phillip.fitzsimmons@swosu.edu.

The Widow Burden Meets William Eagle Feather Outside of Gold Creek

by Robert Cooperman

I searched for William's campfire,
seeking a scrap of solace
from the man I can't help loving,
but whose life in the woods
is so strange and wild.

Each tree loomed identical,
each crackling twig a cougar.
Desperate and despairing,
I cast about for the dim path
back to town: vanished
in that dark, magic-wood.

In dusk mist, a great owl
swooped like Thomas' ghost.
"You adulterous hypocrite!"
I shrieked. A rough hand stifled my mouth, lungs filling with terror's silent music.

William! I kissed him fierce,
tore at his clothes,
like women who risk all,
in novels.

"Come away with me now,"
he caressed me after
we had dressed again.
I took one step with him,
one back to town—the path
suddenly as clearly marked
as the boulevards
of my Boston girlhood.

