

6-15-2005

Mary LaFrance Speculates on the Father of Her Unborn Child

Robert Cooperman

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview>

Part of the Fiction Commons, Nonfiction Commons, Photography Commons, and the Poetry Commons

---

Recommended Citation

Cooperman, Robert (2005) "Mary LaFrance Speculates on the Father of Her Unborn Child," Westview: Vol. 24: Iss. 2, Article 38.

Available at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview/vol24/iss2/38>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at SWOSU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Westview by an authorized administrator of SWOSU Digital Commons. For more information, please contact phillip.fitzsimmons@swosu.edu.

Mary LaFrance Speculates on the Father of Her Unborn Child

by Robert Cooperman

I never told Preacher
it might not be his: no sense stepping on a sunning rattler.
Sure, the Reverend set me up in a cottage; but waiting for his visits was long as a moaning blizzard winter, and Patience cards never turned up my way, even when I cheated.
So I entertained, gifts handy,
had Preacher gone back on his word:
no telling how a white man'll act
when a baby bears him less likeness than a papoose.

One man not in the contest,
One-eyed John Sprockett;
his grizzly-slashed face shudders me like every ghost killed in the War.
Only other gent who can't join the list,
the breed tracker, Eagle Feather.
I only do white men, though I'd bet Widow Burden wouldn't mind
a buggy ride to Heaven with him, the way she stared at the funeral,
then shifted her eyes quick as the flutter of a butterfly's wings.

Come to think of it,
I might make an exception for him,
his face more handsome
than the one of Jesus
I cut out of a book once,
to stare at on my wall.

