

6-15-2001

An Explanation

Albert Goldbarth

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview>

 Part of the Fiction Commons, Nonfiction Commons, Photography Commons, and the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Goldbarth, Albert (2001) "An Explanation," Westview: Vol. 20 : Iss. 2 , Article 13.
Available at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview/vol20/iss2/13>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at SWOSU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Westview by an authorized administrator of SWOSU Digital Commons. For more information, please contact phillip.fitzsimmons@swosu.edu.

An Explanation

by Albert Goldbarth

They say this really happened, in the Church of Eternal Light:
a penitent dropped to the floor wearing nothing but sweat, she spasmed like some snake on an electrified wire, she uttered
angel eldestspeech, and then she disappeared—they mean totally, and at once. First the entire tarpaper room gave a shudder, and then she disappeared—at once, and totally.
Nobody understands it. Well, maybe I understand it. Once, in 8th grade, Denton Nashbell had an epileptic seizure. Mrs. Modderhock squatted above where he flapped like something half a person half a pennant, she was pressing a filthy spoon to his tongue.
I've remembered him 25 years now. And—that woman? she was the universe's tongue the universe swallowed. That's as good an explanation as any.
Once, in sleep, you started a dream soliloquy,
the grammar of which is snow on fire, the words are neuron-scrawl, are words the elements sing to their molecules . . .
—I threw myself across you.
It wasn't sex this time. I just wanted to keep you beside me, in this world.

©1991 by Albert Goldbarth;
from Heaven and Earth (the University of Georgia Press)

