

A JOURNAL OF WESTERN OKLAHOMA

WESTVIEW

Westview

Volume 18
Issue 2 Spring/Summer

Article 24

6-15-1999

Sophia Starling Arrives with John Sprockett in Gold Creek, Colorado Territory, Early 1874

Robert Cooperman

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview>

 Part of the Fiction Commons, Nonfiction Commons, Photography Commons, and the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Cooperman, Robert (1999) "Sophia Starling Arrives with John Sprockett in Gold Creek, Colorado Territory, Early 1874," Westview. Vol. 18: Iss. 2, Article 24.

Available at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview/vol18/iss2/24>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at SWOSU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Westview by an authorized administrator of SWOSU Digital Commons. For more information, please contact phillip.fitzsimmons@swosu.edu.

 SWOSUTM

Sophia Starling Arrives with John Sprockett in Gold Creek, Colorado Territory, Early 1874

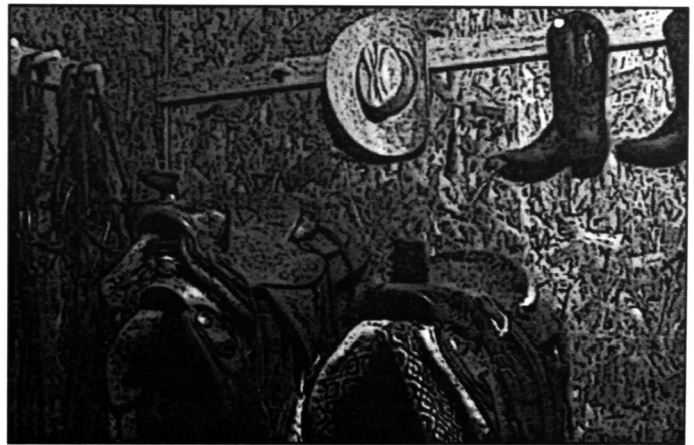

by Robert Cooperman

Though we've stumbled ten miles in waist-high snow, I feel no gratitude for this town, as foul as any hole
since apes, or angels, fell from trees,
or heaven, into caves dank as crypts:
a livery, a jail, and the saloon-hotel
that doubles as a courtroom
when the circuit judge isn't drunk.
Beds upstairs for exhausted miners,
and for poor drabs who have bartered
their hearts for money from strangers.

Meals are being served.
I cling to John's arm, a child
afraid to be splattered by bullies.
One terrific glare from Mr. Sprockett and all eyes drop to their hands,
as men once trembled
at black welts of plague.

One night of no longer being a maiden
and the world seems depraved to me:
this fetid saloon—tobacco smoke
like the fumes of Hell—those beds
with barely a curtain instead of a decent door.
I fear Mr. Sprockett will try with force
what I yielded to for love.
He seemed dear as a play-panda last night,
not this walking scarred horror
infamous for the rage I've ignored.

I can barely touch my half-cooked meat.
"This flea-bag has one private room,"
Mr. Sprockett advises. "Use the lock."
I touch his hand in gratitude,
love flooding like Juliet's.
He pulls back as if from a scorpion.

Photograph by C. Michael McKinney

