Reckoning for Edward Abbey,

ONE OF THE FOUNDERS OF EARTH FIRST! AND AUTHOR OF DESERT SOLITAIRE AND THE MONKEYWRENCH GANG

Larna takes our two scrapping kids, as an act of mercy, to a Van Damme double feature so I can get my grading done.
Sprawled on the bed, I stoically lift each leaden page of improvised analysis, freshman insight into the Romantic lyric, case studies in years of compulsory miseducation, intimations of a bad future for the kids. I'm rehashing petty departmental turf wars by the time I finish.
With a bad taste in my mouth for my species,
I light a Cuesta Rey, channel surf to a fishing show and the soothing babble of huckster good ole' boys.
When they cut to a commercial for Eagle Claws, I hear the wind
raid our subdivision, set the rafters moaning.

Heat, dust, light, broad spaces in it.
The kids will return with grit in their hair, will wash out enough to dip a miner's pan.
I remember Uncle Jaspers' ranch by the North Canadian.
Pastures, gullies, cliffs there don't see hominids for months at a stretch.

My fanatic cigar purifies itself to ash while the wind sends the house on wagon axles across the prairie, the old antenna wire slapping the living room window, the storm door rocking and creaking.

Ed Abbey loved cigars. His last trip down the Colorado, he must have mashed a soggy stub between his teeth though that stretch was almost gentle, the rapids more spectacular than dangerous because he'd discovered he was sick and wouldn't be better. At what point did his age, his sickness, the late autumn convince him the emptiness behind the cliff's face, under white water, wasn't the dunes' soft erasure, and so couldn't comfort him as the wind lulls me?
It became his first wife who died in New York.
He left her body at the hospital to walk the city streets with a loaded .45 in his coat, in a rage to deliver his reckoning for a poisoned world.

I have shower duty tonight: Seth will forget his towel, will forget to rinse the tub, Hannah must have the temperature just so.

His last time down the rushing Colorado, Abbey wanted his latest wife and the first one, he wanted the few people he trusted.
