

12-15-1993

Mother Goose

Sam Lackey

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview>

Recommended Citation

Lackey, Sam (1993) "Mother Goose," Westview: Vol. 13 : Iss. 2 , Article 15.
Available at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview/vol13/iss2/15>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at SWOSU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Westview by an authorized administrator of SWOSU Digital Commons. For more information, please contact phillip.fitzsimmons@swosu.edu.

MOTHER GOOSE

Sam Lackey

The child's long, plaintive cry
Flew across the inlet.
The staccato notes of disapproval arrive
From brother and sister
Who knew the parents were still asleep.
"Got to go under that"
The words sank into the hissing waves.
The notes of the morning dove turned
My mind around to land.

Then they were there.
The clatter and gossip of geese.
Canadian geese on an Oklahoma lake.
Still in formation,
Sliding down the tilted water
Into a wondering crowd at the shore.

All found voices as tiny Alice
Cast her web of innocence and bread.
Her mother's magic carefully at rest,
Magic of a thousand birds.
Standing out of the charmed circle,
She sees her gift alive.

Electric, the child quivers,
Flexes like a bow,
Arms full of flight;
And, eye to eye,
She casts her web of life in
Long, sure, arcing shots . . .
Into the golden throats.