Summer 7-15-1993

In This Issue

Glen GoodKnight

Follow this and additional works at: https://dc.swosu.edu/mythlore

Part of the Children's and Young Adult Literature Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://dc.swosu.edu/mythlore/vol19/iss3/11

This Editorial Introduction is brought to you for free and open access by the Mythopoeic Society at SWOSU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Mythlore: A Journal of J.R.R. Tolkien, C.S. Lewis, Charles Williams, and Mythopoeic Literature by an authorized editor of SWOSU Digital Commons. An ADA compliant document is available upon request. For more information, please contact phillip.fitzsimmons@swosu.edu.
There have not been many special issues of Mythlore in its twenty-three year history. The last one was last summer: The J.R.R. Tolkien Centenary Special Issue. We are happy to observe with this issue the Centenary of Dorothy L. Sayers. In putting the issue together, I thought it would be a good idea to write an introduction, primarily to point out the connections, unknown to many, between Sayers and the Inklings. Anyone who knows something of the Inklings knows of her friendship with Lewis and Williams, but many do not know how detailed it was. I asked Nancy-Lou Patterson if she could make a list of some of these details; instead she went on to write the excellent introduction on the following two pages.

We owe much to Nancy-Lou in this issue. She was fairly ill in the past few years, and we rejoice in her recovery. At the age of 63, much has happened to her this year. She retired from her teaching in the Fine Arts Department of the University of Waterloo, in Ontario, Canada, and her university made her Professor Emeritus, which is a honor only occasionally given there. Also she has just been awarded the honorary degrees of Doctor of Literature (D. Litt.) at Wilfred Laurier University. This, by the way, is the same degree given to Dorothy L. Sayers by the University of Durham in 1950. Congratulations to the honors and a well earned retirement. Bravo Nancy-Lou!

Besides Nancy-Lou’s introduction, and her substantive article on "A Bloomsbury Blue-Stocking," we have Joe Christoher’s "The Fragmentary Lord Peter" and Sarah Beach’s "Harriet in Rehearsal: Hilary Thorpe in The Nine Tailors, in addition to the front and back covers by Nancy-Lou and Sarah."

There is of course material on other topics: Kath Filmer-Davies shares a provocative paper on "Welsh Myth and Contemporary Literature." Even more provocatively we have Mervyn Nicholson’s "Bram Stoker and C.S. Lewis."

This issue again demonstrates the international participation in Mythlore. Nancy-Lou Patterson is a Canadian, as is Mervyn Nicholson, who is the Chairman of the Department of English at the University College of the Cariboos in British Columbia. Kath Filmer-Davies is Australian, teaching at the University of Queensland. Two of our letters writers are also Australian: the well-known Rhona Beare at the University of Newcastle, Australia, and John Laurent of Griffith University, Australia (who shared a paper on Lewis in the last issue).

As I have said before: ideas do not recognize borders. We welcome participation by all from across-town to the other side of the world.

— Glen GoodKnight