3-15-1991

Grandma's Eyes

Carl Stanislaus

Follow this and additional works at: https://dc.swosu.edu/westview

Recommended Citation
 Available at: https://dc.swosu.edu/westview/vol10/iss3/25

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at SWOSU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Westview by an authorized administrator of SWOSU Digital Commons. For more information, please contact phillip.fitzsimmons@swosu.edu.
In the attic is a wedding picture, a handsome couple of years gone by. He stands in stern determination Beside a girl with Grandma’s eyes.

Here old school annuals of the twenties, with photos of couples in fond embrace, an awkward boy, who wasn’t Grandpa, kissing a girl with Grandma’s face.

They used the red and rusting old Victrola, baseball glove with broken laces, clarinet that lost its mouthpiece, and running shoes for high-school races.

They loved the “rockey” horse’s little rider and bed where he had slumbered.

They lived the crumbling thirties’ calendar, whose days again are numbered.

There’s a crib—and well-worn high chair used by handsome, wayward Uncle John.

Grandma never gave up the praying; only the Lord knows where John has gone.

Let’s close the attic and lock it, with its love and joy and family ties—and go to the old gal and tell her: we’ll always love the girl with Grandma’s eyes. *