

7-15-1987

Spring Storm

Richard Garrity

Follow this and additional works at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview>

Recommended Citation

Garrity, Richard (1987) "Spring Storm," Westview: Vol. 6: Iss. 4, Article 22.

Available at: <https://dc.swosu.edu/westview/vol6/iss4/22>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by the Journals at SWOSU Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Westview by an authorized administrator of SWOSU Digital Commons.
For more information, please contact phillip.fitzsimmons@swosu.edu.

Spring Storm

By Richard Garrity

A depthless amber glow
Filters across the field
Crackling in intensity
With pent fury to wield.
Rolling black clouds,
Strutted with a lesser mass
Flee before the wind
And thunder resonance.

From the sullen gloom,
The driven blast of rain
Gluts the creeks
And pummels the plain.

Thin shafts of light,
Golden, moist, probing,
In a cloud-filled sky
Searched for an opening.

In the west,
On the horizon,
Entirely freed,
Is the setting sun.

Against the eastern clouds
A rainbow is formed.
Arched against the sky,
A sign if the rain's end.

In the pasture,
Every depression is a pool,
Sparkling in the sun.
Each blade of grass a jewel.

In the newly filled ponds,
A frog chorus is heard.
From the wet tree
Sings the mockingbird.

Tiny leaf buds
Stir restlessly
In their husks
As they open noisily.

A second rainbow
Doubles God's promises
As in the beginning
This is Genesis.

